Dance:
Freedom through discipline

by Ann Keller

1....2....3....pull up in the torso...2...3...that's better....now....SHARP!....No...No...No...let's try again...

Dance. The outer expression of an inner life set to music. Modern dance . . . freer than ballet, but equally disciplined . . . more introspective than jazz . . . A war baby, born with the century in the rebellion of a few against the tyranny of traditional dance forms that no longer throbbed with the rhythm of contemporary America . . . wafting its youth along the currents of free-flowing breezes, exulting in its liberation from the claustrophobia of rigid form, indulging too much, perhaps, in self-expression, mysticism . . . . running, as all youth, too swiftly for control.

. . . . Waking from the revel of just being . . . turning inward, seeking the why and the how . . . experimenting freely, but critically, with body movement, with assymetry, with the arcs of space between an impetus, fall, and recovery, with the most organic of all beats, the pulsation of blood through its courses . . . . . concerned now not with self, but with those common rhythms that link all selves.

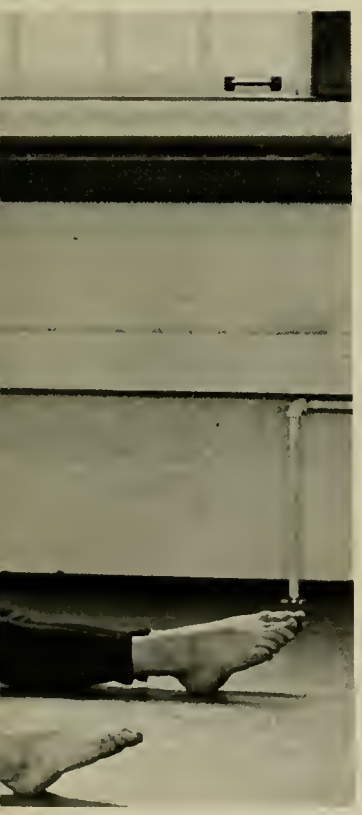
. . . Duncan, St. Denis, Shawn, Weidman, Humphrey, Graham . . . each catching the pulse and quickening it toward maturity . . . The studio: "here you are in competition only with the dancer you hope to become" . . . where no half-way measures are tolerated . . . . where the body is trained with rigour so that one day, it may dance with freedom . . .

October-summit conference . . . Guess what? We have to get started on the concert . . . Huh? It's only October! The concert isn't til April . . . And just how long do you think it takes to conceive, cast, choreograph, rehearse, stage, costume, and light a show . . . a week? . . . Who's doing dances? Has anyone gotten started? . .-. Well, several have ideas . . . perhaps they'd better get moving!

November-rehearsal . . . 2 . . . 3 . . . that's better . . . now, again . . . No, the step is right but the feeling isn't there. I want more tension, more power . . . Hell, we've been rehearsing for two hours . . . I'm dead! What do you want? Blood? . . . Nope. Just more sweat . . .

December-summit conference . . . Are the dances for the concert done yet? . . . WHAT . . . ? . . .?

photographed by Ken Firestone



January—rehearsal . . . How about calling it quits for tonight? . . . Yeah? And when are we supposed to polish this dance? Opening night? . . . Look, you're doing great! It's my dance and I'm satisfied . . . You're going to kill yourselves! . . . That may very well be . . . Now, how about a couple more run-throughs? . . . (masochists) . . .

February—technical rehearsal . . . (2 A.M.) . . . Sorry, nobody leaves til the lights for all the dances are set . . .

March—general hysteria . . . It's shaping up! I think we're going to be great! . . . It's awful . . . I'm ashamed to show my face on that stage . . . Oh God! I think I've sprained my knee! . . . My costume is too baggy.

. . . I'M AFRAID . . . . . .

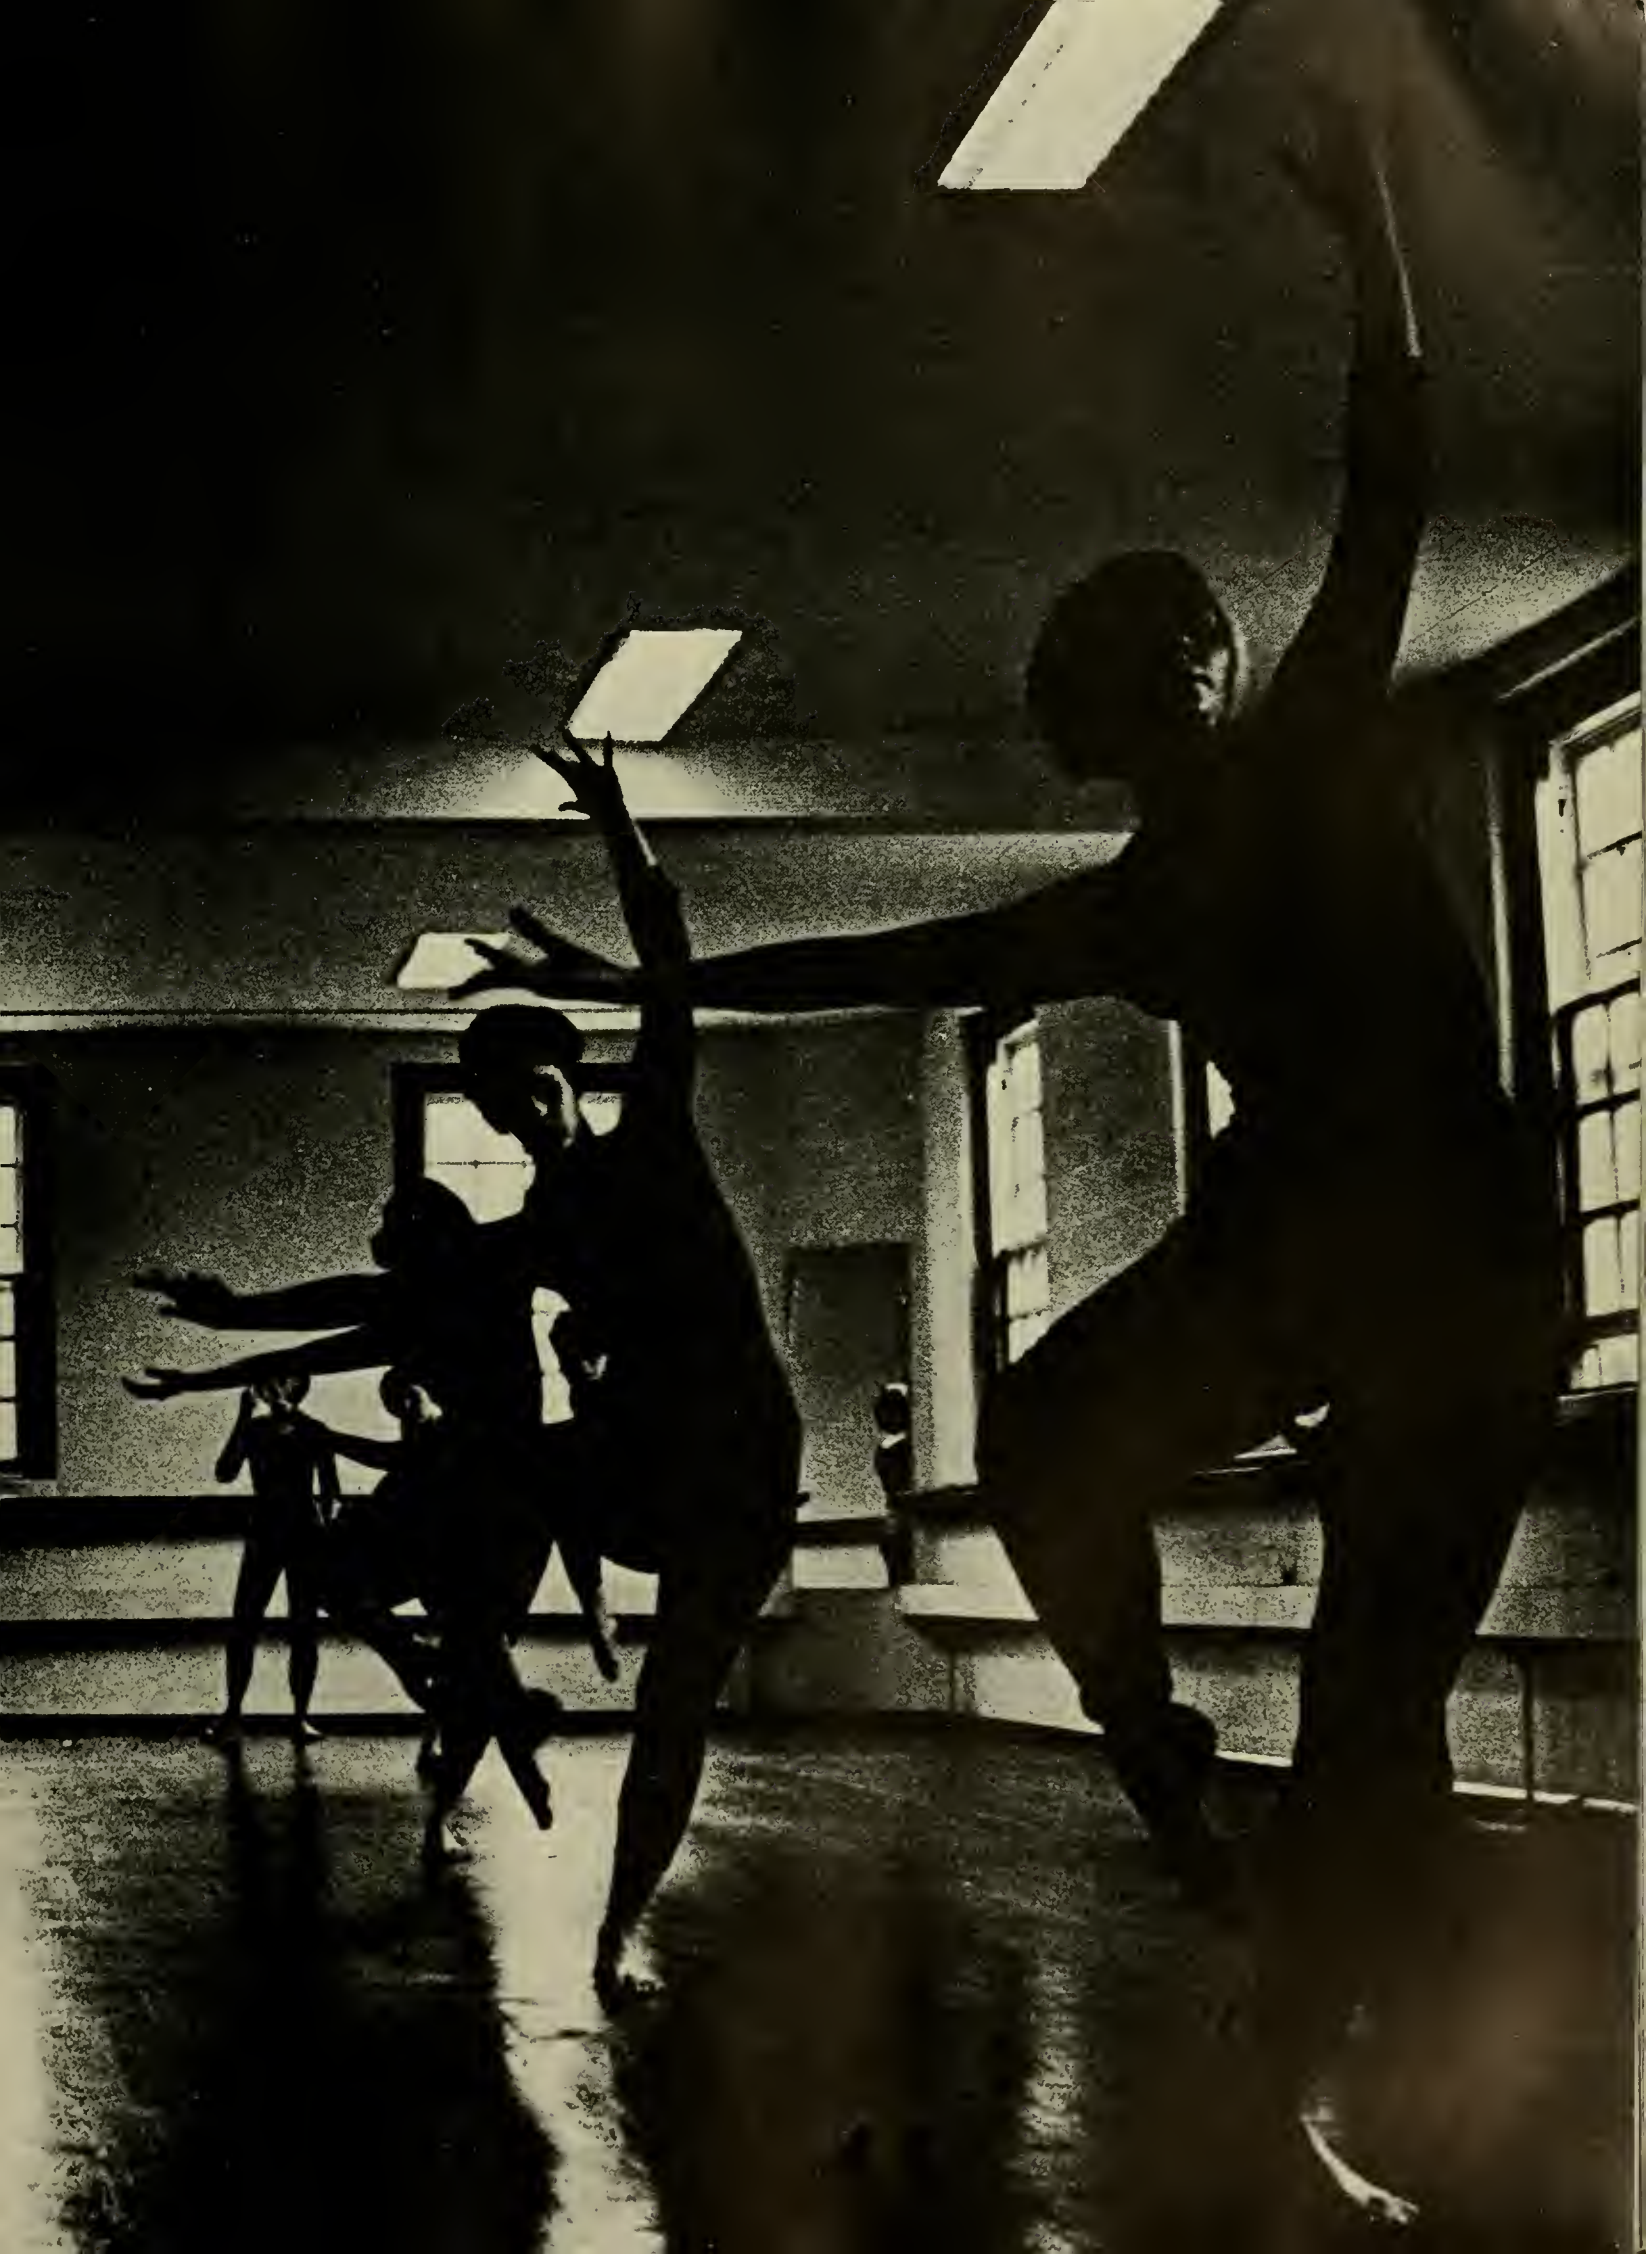
April-Washington Post critique by Jean Battey, dance commentator:

. . . "University of Maryland dance group shines . . ."

. . . ". . . high level of performance and creativity . . ."

. . . "sureness and style . . . impressive . . ."

May-no comments. Everyone is back at the studio working!



Art: Reflections Filtered Through Trained Eye

Gallery exhibitions and an evening lecture series are just a few signs of the expanding programs in the Art Department. This department which has its new home in the Fine Arts Building includes courses in art history, are education and studion art.

The faculty consisting of over 30 members has shown a great desire to continue its quest for recognition as one of the finest departments on campus. During the past year the Department has received two substantial grants from the National Humanities Foundation. One grant will go toward establishing M.A. candidates for students learning the process of setting up an art gallery. At present Art History can give only M.A. degrees, but plans are already underway to create a PH.D. program. M.A. candidates in studio specialize in painting, sculpture, printmaking or drawing.

Studio Classes

Two major exhibits were displayed by the Department this year. They were "Meticulous Realism" and "Spontaneous Creation," an abstract art collection borrowed from the American Federation of Art in New York. Both exhibits met with great success.

A college collection of the noted Arthur G. Dove was introduced by a lecture from Mrs. Edith Halpert of the Downtown Gallery in New York. The Department lecture program averages two guest speakers a month. These have included "The Symbology of Color" by Sidney Gross of the Art Students League of New York and "Egyptian Revival Art" by Richard Carrott.

Printmaking

Intaglio printmaking in the University's Art Department is done on copper plate. After lines are etched into the plate it is inked and set on the etching press. Usually from five to several hundred copies are printed and numbered, after which the plates are destroyed.

In Lithography, another form of printmaking, designs are made by causing chemical changes on the surface of stone. The stone must be kept wet while the printing is in process.

Students who have experimented in printmaking have come up with several new ideas. One student built up plates with modeling paste and used cardboard for the raised surface. Another used old records as a surface with modeling paste added.

Relief printing often is done in wood cuts and linoleum cuts. In this method you cut away all material that you do not want to print.

Theatre:
There's No Business...

Like Show Business

by Peggi Drum

Before Annie could get her gun, she and her cast of 60 had to learn songs, dances, lines, and movement. To the beginning actor the word theatre began to mean more than bowing to an applauding audience. To the seasoned UT performer, theatre means another round of experimentation, frustration, and occasional satisfaction. To everyone in a production, theatre means hard work and single joy.

Rehearsals began in early November. After surviving the trial of auditions, the cast list was posted and two students were given the chance to play in the exciting but exhausting role of "Annie." For the rest of the cast this meant a double chance also. Working with two personalities as "Annie" meant adjusting to the different interpretations of the character. Of course this is more difficult but it is also experience; it is learning and that is why students come to UT, to learn the technique of theatre.

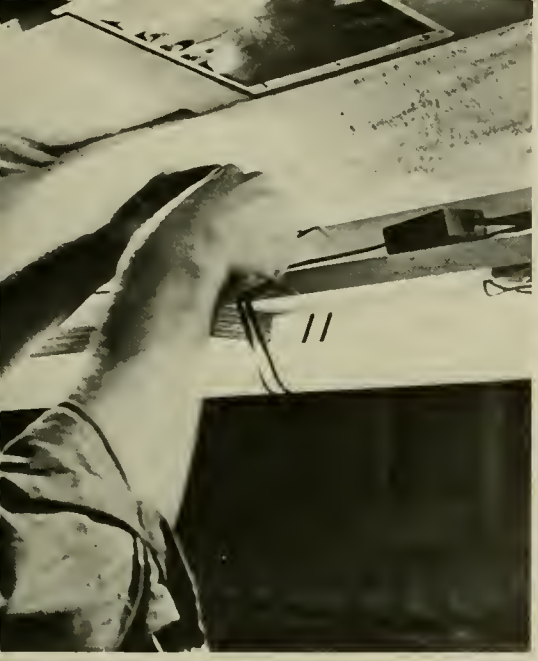
Roger Meersman directs

First, it was chorus rehearsal. With only four weeks to learn the whole show, those first few music rehearsals make one month's preparation seem like five months too short. But everynight at 6:30 voices are exercised and after a week of fighting with Irving Berlin's music, the possibility of having the show ready seems somewhat more likely. But, there's still dancing and blocking to learn.

No one realizes how clumsy two feet can be until dance rehearsals begin. Strange, but the right couldn't go with the left foot even if one knew where the other is attempting to go. And, the aching muscles. It is during rehearsal for a musical when the sheer luxury of a steaming bath is the only pleasure that makes existing livable. But, now it's only time for quick showers—and cold ones at that.



On the stage everyone is really trying to follow the director's instruction. "Walk down left, turn, and face Annie. No! Down LEFT. Use your upstage hand to gesture. Where's your technique?" Where is my chance to change my major? Okay, we'll do it again. This time it is almost right. Next time. . . .

Another disaster. Up and down all those stairs, walking and singing? No one can expect everyone to get on stage so quickly. But everyone IS expected and does enter quickly—yes, and in Cowboy Boots.

Costume fittings mean standing, bending, stooping to see if you can move in the costume. After being pinned and pricked for what seems to be an eternity, it's time to try make-up.

Jars of cream, paint, and spray are almost the signals to bid theatre a fast good-bye and library science so warm a welcome that Dewey's decimal system would skip a digit. But something says its too late to turn back.

What makes the four weeks even more impossible is that everyone volunteers to participate in the production. All those hours of singing, memorizing, dancing are donated. Repeating scenes over and over so they are perfected take hours from leisure and are spent to tell the story of some country-bumpkin called Annie Oakley.

Sometime between auditions and opening night a determination, a stubbornness developes and you know you won't quit. You discover something about "Annie" and you have to share it with the audience . . . You work harder as THE day gets closer and rehearsals get longer. Suddenly, it is so simple to understand. You know why.

All the hours are spent creating magic. You ignore the fear of failing by concentrating on success. You give your whole personality to capture the audience. Actor and director mold a world of fantasy by transporting everyman to a moment of crystle illusion. Designer and technician suspend the dream by color, line and whispering light.

And when the final performance is punctuated by the curtain, the actor knows the most alone moment of empty joy. That laugh, that song, that feeling with the audience—none can ever be recreated. For the actor there is only the answer —to "play" more is to give again. And this is the work in theatre.

Music

by Kathy Blieth

The Music Department, headed by Homer Ulrich, does more than just help the general student develop sound critical judgment and discriminating taste in music or provide professional training. It also provides an atmosphere in which students can develop and cultivate all musical interests, an opportunity for self-expression and a place where individual talent can be discovered and perfected.

The Men's Glee Club provides male students with an opportunity to study and perform choral arrangements. Many of the group's concerts are given in conjunction with the Women's Chorus, including the annual Christmas Concert.

Originally, the University Chapel Choir was organized for the specific purpose of performing services taking place in the Memorial Chapel. However the Choir's present participation on campus does not stop here. Each year the Choir sings "The Elijah" by Mendelssohn at their Thanksgiving Concert and Handel's "The Messiah" at their annual Christmas Concert.

The Madrigal Singers is a closely-knit group made up of students from all colleges at the University. Their performances are enhanced by the beautiful Elizabethan costumes which were designed and made by the Home Economics department. The Madrigal Singers present a variety of programs, but most of them focus on the group's specialty, a vast repertory of music from the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries.

The University Bands provide many opportunities for talent expression. The Marching Band performed its usual pre-game and half-time performances this year, but with all new sousaphones. The Band's half-time performances included such themes as "Annie Get Your Gun," "St. Louis Blues," and "Crazy Rhythm."

In addition to the standard orchestral programs, the University Symphony Orchestra has given a "pops" concert, accompanied performances with campus choral groups, performed in the opera production, at the President's Convocation, and has given two "concerto" concerts which provide opportunities for students to appear as soloists and conductors. The two full symphonic programs featured faculty soloists, while one program featured the performance of a work composed by a MU graduate and commissioned by the University Orchestra. Services are provided by the orchestra to the Maryland Orchestra Director's Association by hosting the annual contest-festival and playing new publications.

the newest art

Photography is an art! Many "artists" say otherwise, but lately many more have agreed that it is. Photography takes practice, as music does. Photography takes skill, as painting does. Photography takes experience, as writing does. And photography needs that magic touch, inspiration, as all arts do.

When a photographer creates, he usually does so in a time period lasting less than a second. But behind this decisive moment goes an entire personality. The photographer must probe his subject deeply, whatever it may be. To do this, he must be well-read, tasteful educated in other arts; in short, he must be a well-rounded person.

Photography is a relatively recent art. It started in the last century as a substitute for the portrait artist. Before long some of the art's practitioners pointed their cameras at the world. They were delighted with the results. Photographers today explore many realms, from the atomic to the galactic. But even today they constantly turn to the realm that has intrigued every artist since time began: the exuberant world of man.

On the next ten pages we present the works of five senior photographers who have worked for the publications of the University of Maryland.

Ken Firestone

Henning Christoph

At age 23, Diamondback photo editor Henning Christoph has been a successful photographer for six years.

The mustached leader of the Dark Room Putsch got his first break at age 17, when the Washington Daily News played his shot of a fight at a soccer game on the front page.

After high school, the German-born Henning free-lanced in Europe, Mexico, and the United States with a short stint in between as an industrial photographer in Hann Munden, Germany.

In '62, Henning won first prize in the Washington Star photo contest; in '65, he won first, second, and fourth prize.

Last summer, he worked as a press photographer for two Gannett newspapers in Rochester, N.Y.: the Times-Union and Democrat and Chronicle.

After his graduation in June, Henning will study photography in Essen, Germany at the Volkwangschule, an art institute directed by the famous Otto Steinert.

Ken Firestone

At home backstage at the theater, or in the middle of a civil rights demonstration, Ken Firestone has had experience on both magazines and newspapers. He has worked for the Washington Star. the Houston (Texas) Post, and the National Geographic. Recent assignments have taken Ken to Canada's Yukon Territory to photograph moving glaciers, and the top of the Washington Monument for a night to photograph a laser.

Last Christmas found Ken covering a reenactment of Washington crossing the Delaware. He now claims that he is an unofficial Revolutionary War correspondent.

Ken's latest project is editing and photographing for this yearbook. When he graduates this June, he hopes to go into freelance magazine work.

Mike Rossoff

A concentration on the feminine form pervades the portfolio of Mike Edward Rossoff. Mike, who has worked as a Diamondback and Terrapin photographer, feels that through posing and lighting, the camera and a practiced eye "can show the best of a beautiful girl."

His modern girl captured in a nymphlike setting of trees and forest conveys a "statuesque" appearance the artist believes captures the image of a female. The nude simple presents a figure study.

His candid shot of an old man's gaze is inserted here, the photographer confesses, to show that he doesn't just concentrate on women.

Mike began his photographic endeavors at age 13. Last spring he won grand prize in a campus picture contest. A zoology major, he will venture to Africa next year to add an international note to his portfolio of women.

The "Great Society"

Karl Sanger

Karl Sanger's camera specialties range over a wide field, from impressionistic blurred-action interpretations of basketball to the candid, character-revealing photographs of youngsters shown on these pages. A native Washington suburbanite, Karl had been taking pictures even before he entered Maryland. His fondness for unusual and exciting outdoor activities —skin diving, caveing, skiing—has led to many pictures not usually found in a young photographer's portfolio.

In 1965, Karl took his camera and a case-full of lenses to Baltimore. His objective: Baltimore harbor. His innocent arrival in full view led to polite refusals from harbor officials. Most of the details of the ensuing skirmish are confidential, Karl maintains, but never hesitates to display the three-board display of enlargements he shipped off to the Kappa Alpha Mu college photo contest the following year.

Shown on these pages are some of the pictures Karl feels are more expressive of his talents. Included to the left is his most recent award winner, selected by the judges of the 1966 KAM college contest.

Steve Thompson

If one word had to be chosen to sum up the work of photographer Steve Thompson, that word would be variety.

Photo editors say Thompson is the sort of versatile photographer who can get along with anyone on any assignment. Since becoming a regular Diamondback staff member in February 1966, Thompson's assignments have run the gamut, from basketball games to modern dance performances. His photos consistently get top play in the Diamondback.

In addition to his campus-oriented shots, Thompson has used his varied photographic equipment extensively in summer jobs on cruise ships to the Caribbean area, Russia and other ports.

However, Thompson's main interests in addition to extensive free-lance work are his positions as photo editor of the Greek newspaper and as a staff photographer for the Diamondback and Terrapin.

Experimental Theatre

by Peggi Drum

Experimental Theatre is a small room that offers the audience of seventy-five in capacity the opportunity to see new interpretations of little or well known dramas. The directors in ET are graduate drama students or upper-class undergraduates who have studied advanced directing.

Operating on a minimum budget with extra effects supplied by friends and generous colleagues, the directors cast each production by using undergraduate actors to tell the story. Though most productions are less than one hour in length, rehearsal time is long and demanding. There is always one rehearsal, usually a few days prior to the opening performance, when the director considers changing major study and the actors want to enlist for the next USO tour to the Australian Bush. Everything possible goes wrong—IT just isn't there. What is present is short tempers, hurt feelings, and despair. But that despair is challenge and that means try again. Everyone tries and somehow that magic IT appears. The experiment is complete and successful—IT is theatre!

photographed by Ken Firestone

In February, 1967, Experimental Theatre produced Escurial. It was directed by Roberta Hughes, while the mad king was played by G. Randolph Burnham and the soulful fool by David Harper.

Escurial is the story of a king in the last stages of feverish decay who is attended by howling dogs, an executioner, a priest, and his Flemish jester. His queen is dying and rather than lamenting her death as he should, he reveals to the audience by means of a game, the cause of her death. He has poisoned her because she loved the jester. He delights in tormenting the jester up to a point and then kills him.

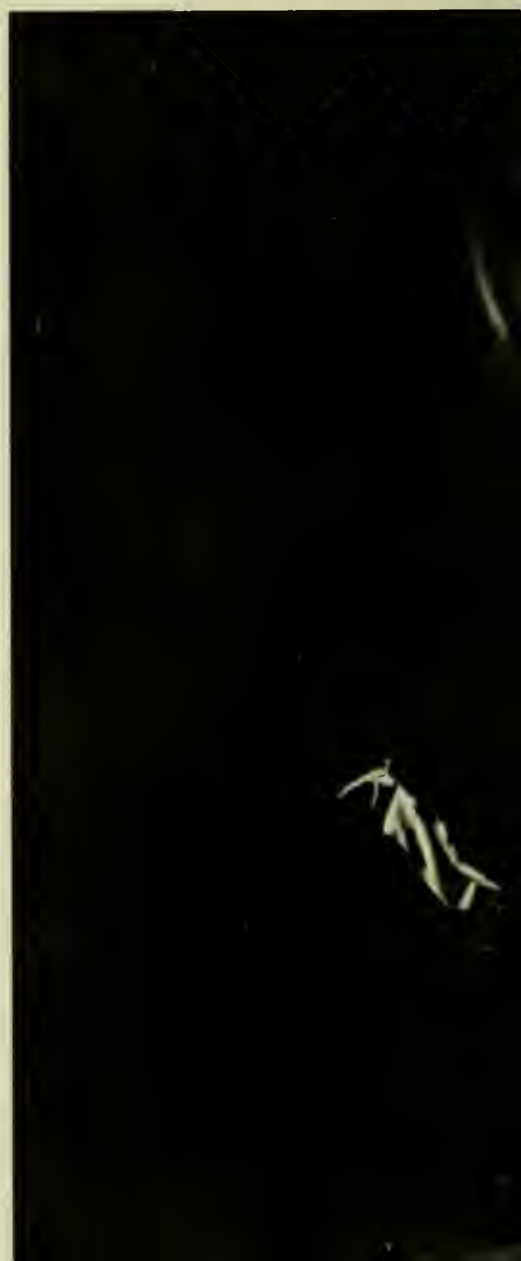
...in the end, the King had his clown strangled...



Flying

Follies

photographed by Ken Firestone

by Kathy Blieth

The Flying Follies has been a successful entertainment group since 1958 when several college students returning from a U.S.O. tour organized the Follies at Maryland.

Completely student run, the Follies is a shining example of dedication and enthusiasm among college students working together to achieve an entertaining goal. Each year, Flying Follies performs at army installations throughout the area and its members have toured the world taking with them their many and sometimes unusual variety acts.

"Over Here, Over There" was the theme on which the Follies Troupe built their 1966-67 variety show. Filled with excitement, sparkle and abounding with talent, the Follies took their audiences into the great American past giving them a review representative of that bygone era. Also, with emphasis on the present, the group performed musical numbers centering around New York. Turning their attention to "Over There," the Follies danced and in the spirit of the old and new Europe. Tying the show together, a girl in a balloon flew over the stage offering amusing commentary on the world in general and on the acts being presented.

Madrigals

The University of Maryland Madrigal Singers are a group of undergraduate students whose success and critical acclaim have been phenomenal since their establishment in 1958. Members of the organization represent a variety of academic fields in addition to music.

The reportoire of the ensemble includes vocal and instrumental music of the Renaissance and pre-Renaissance, as well as early and contemporary American music and folk songs. The music of the Renaissance is performed in colorful costumes of the time; instruments—recorders, lute, guitar, harpsichord, clavichord, rebec, viola da gamba—are used for accompaniment and solos according to performance practices of the periods. The American music repertoire is performed in modern dress.

photographed by Ken Firestone

The University of Maryland Madrigal Singers have been heard in concert nationally and internationally. They were selected by a panel of experts from the most competent professional and collegiate talent in the United States to tour the Near East, North Africa and Great Britain for the Department of State as part of the Cultural Presentations program. The fourteen-week tour in the spring of 1965 took them to eleven countries where they gave over ninety concerts.

They have appeared on the national network of NBC radio and television. In Maryland, Pennsylvania, and the greater Washington area they are particularly well known as the WBAL-TV Carolers, having performed as such in community concerts and on television since 1959. Their unusual Christmas programs of ancient carols and nöels have also been heard on Washington television and radio stations WRC and WTTG. They have also performed on WTOP-TV and other television stations.

Fitzgerald, (assistant director). Not pictured: Rose Marie Grentzer (director), J. Spicknall (assistant director—instrumental group).

Professional engagements include concerts for colleges and universities and for community concerts, as well as an impressive round of special invitation appearances. The most recent invitation appearances include a concert at the White House during the 1965 Christmas season, given after the President's dinner honoring former West German chancellor Ehrhardt. During the 1966 Christmas season the Madrigal Singers performed an invitation concert at the Pan American Union's Hall of the Americas.

NEWSLOG

Edward Teller

More than 1,000 members of the student body, faculty and general public accepted the challenge by Edward H. Teller to attend a lecture on physics aimed at the non-scientist.

Teller, often called the father of the H-Bomb, is a nuclear physicist noted for his work on the Manhattan Project begun in 1942. He also received the Enrico Fermi award in 1962.

Teller gave a series of three lectures at the University entitled "The Forgotten Revolution in Physics." He feels that science appreciation should be brought to the attention of practically all college-level students.

U.M.B.C.

The University's little sister may still be in her infancy, but like any new baby she is crying loudly and being heard. Only 710 students registered at the Catonsville Campus for the first fall term as compared to the tens of thousands at the Reckord Armory in College Park.

Although both campuses are known as the University of Maryland, they are separate entities, as are Maryland State College at Princess Anne and the Baltimore professional schools. For this reason football fans may some day see a rivalry emerge between "Cate State" and the Terps. Perhaps by that time the new university in Baltimore County will have matured and developed such adult problems as parking, registration and housing.

Jonathan Prater

The University has "grown up a good deal" reflected Jonathan L. Prater, freshman class vice-president and the first Negro to have competed for any campus wide office.

With a margin of 300 votes out of a total of 1600 cast, Prater not only clinched the vice-presidency but also received the second highest number of votes cast in the election.

"I was campaigning as a qualified candidate and not as a Negro, and I attribute my victory to my qualifications," said Prater. He cited his past positions as president and treasurer of the student council, recipient of two student council leadership awards, student government outstanding member award and Voice of Democracy award.

Hamlet

by Peggi Drum

University Theatre opened its second season in the Fine Arts Theatre with Shakespeare's HAMLET. Robert Milli, an alumnus of Maryland, returned to his Alma Mater to recreate the lead role. Milli first played Hamlet as an undergraduate when he was cast in the title role in the 1957 UT production.

Since graduation, Milli has earned an enviable professional theatre reputation with a repertoire that includes Broadway, off-Broadway, and Television credits. One of the highlights of Milli's career was playing Horatio opposite Richard Burton as Hamlet in the John Gielgud production in 1964.

Though most of Milli's time was spent in rehearsal, he visited the speech and drama classes. He always found time to exchange professional information with the students. Whenever Milli was in the theatre he was always working with two or three student-actors on a scene experimenting with different interpretations or helping the students with movement and projection. And at cast parties after Hamlet, Milli and his wife always managed to talk to everyone—remembering names, exchanging jokes and advice.

Working with Milli gave UT members an opportunity unavailable elsewhere. We came to know and admire Robert Milli, the actor and person.

Drugs

photographed by
Henning Christoph and Bill Kesler

Marijuana, L.S.D., dexidrine and codeine were only a few of the drugs discussed in a controversial Diamondback article about the availability of drugs to Maryland University students. The article drew ire from several University officials, who thought it irresponsible and out of perspective, but the story portrayed a situation as it exists, claimed the Diamondback Editor.

The story was recognized by the William Randolph Hearst Foundation as an example of excellent feature writing. The writer of the article, senior Anne Groer, was awarded a 200 dollar scholarship by the Foundation.

Legislators and Professors Ponder Over Ober Act

photographed by Henning Christoph

A Maryland State Senate committee investigating the Ober Act found that four of the seven speakers against the controversial law were from Maryland University.

Although the Supreme Court has recently supported repeal of similar loyalty oaths in several states, the Judicial Processing Committee of the Maryland Senate squelched the repeal movement in this state by reporting it out of committee with an unfavorable recommendation.

One speaker was a student who was asked to sign the oath in order to get a job as a waiter at the University. Another opponent was a history professor who explained that opposition is "by no means" limited to the University and that the ineffective law is opposed by people from all sides of the political spectrum.

Career Convocation

The University's Fourth Career Convocation was open this year to students in every Class. The Convocation is a gathering of employers who talk to students concerning both full time and summer jobs. The employers represent governmental and educational sources as well as private industry.

This year 110 employers were represented. For the students who did not have a definite career in mind, these meetings offered opportunities to learn about different areas of interest and the best methods of preparation for future career success.

The Convocation drew much interest on campus including that of the S.D.S. members who were peacefully protesting the participation of some corporations in the Vietnam War.

Aaron Copland Conducts at Ritchie

Mod music hit the campus in full force when noted composer Aaron Copland conducted the Washington National Symphony in a concert of contemporary American music in the less than contemporary Ritchie Coliseum.

Copland conducted only two of his own works "Quiet City" and "Connotations For Orchestra", the latter being the highlight of the evening. Also on the program were works by Elliot Carter ("Holiday Overture"), Carl Ruggles ("Of Men and Mountains" . . . based upon the poetry of William Blake) and Roy Harris' "Third Symphony."

by Liz Miller

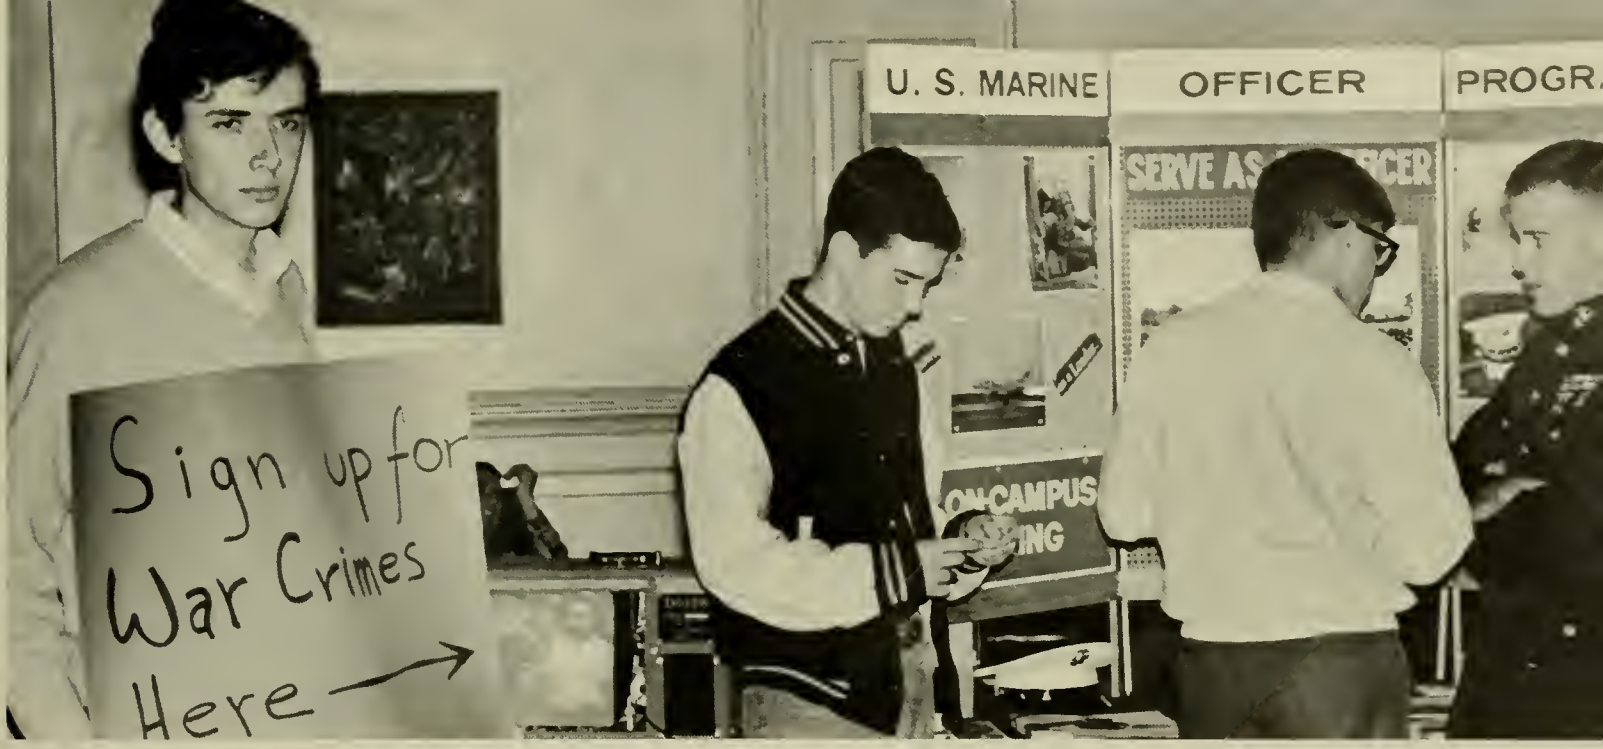
The University of Maryland's three year old chapter of Students for a Democratic Society received much publicity this year by challenging the academic community with its radical ideas and actions. The group provoked thought and commanded the student body's attention concerning both campus issues and the political system of the United States.

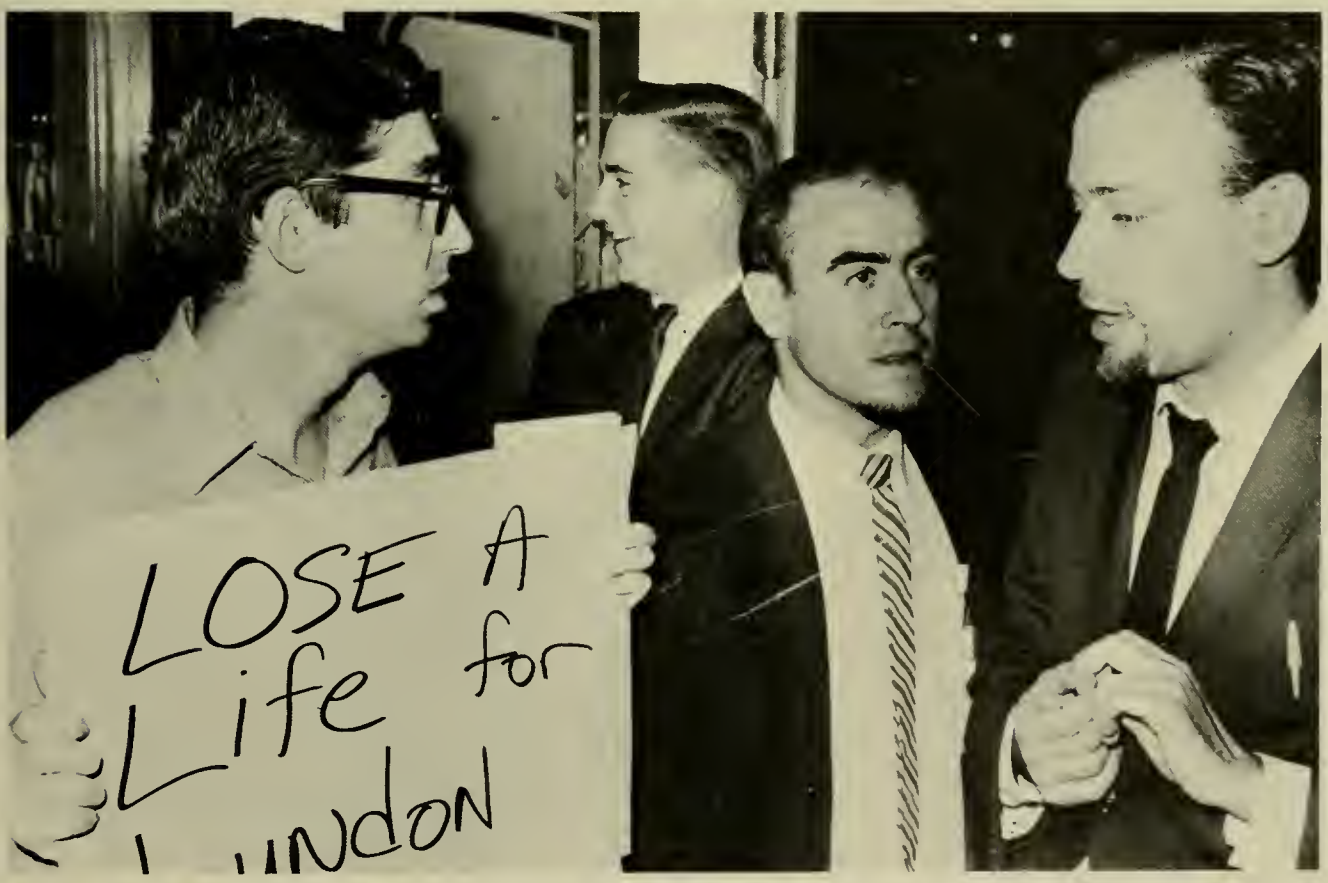
Its primary activity was to protest the American involvement in the war in Vietnam. In line with this issue, the 75 members of this group called upon their fellow students to educate themselves concerning the facts of what they called "America's murderous and aggressive war against the Vietnamese." Other issues that SDS presented were Black Power, students rights and academic freedom.

In the beginning of the year SDS set up a "peace table" in the Student Union lobby for the purpose of discussing the issue of the Vietnamese war and selling literature to clarify its position. Early in December they stationed their table in direct confrontation to a Navy recruiting table with a sign saying "Sign up for war crimes here." A rage of controversy rang in the S.U. lobby and one sign was ripped from a protester's hand. The following day they again set up their table confronting the Navy recruiters. This time however they were confronted by a screaming mass of militant defenders of the Vietnamese war. Blinding T.V. lights, radio and newspaper reporters and photographers aided the progress of the hysteria. SDS then challenged their opposition to debate the issue instead of resorting to riotous melee. This was the beginning of three days of heated but enlightening arguments.

After the Christmas recess SDS returned to find that the Student Union board had passed a regulation banning the holding and carrying of signs in the Student Union. SDS immediately began to circulate a petition to protest what they called a violation of their constitutional rights of free speech and a rule "aimed at preventing . . . SDS from carrying signs protesting the war in Vietnam." They also made appeals through various channels in an effort to have the sign regulation repealed. Eventually SDS broke the sign regulation in order to bring a constitutional test case against the ruling. The director of the Student Union took sixteen undergraduate and seven graduate students' names and identification numbers and barred SDS from using the Union.

photographed by Bill Kisler





The individual participants were interviewed by Darrell F. Rishel, director of the Judicial Office, who decided to refer the case of the sixteen undergraduates to the Central Student Court. SDS presented the Student Court with a list of six demands concerning constitutional due process, that they felt should be met before their case be heard. They demanded: 1) an open hearing, 2) the right of legal representation, 3) the right of oral cross-examination, 4) that graduate students be heard at the University judicial proceedings, 5) that the constitutionality of the sign rule be discussed as their defense and 6) that SDS's use of the Student Union facilities be restored. Only the first and the last demands were met before SDS went to court. Another issue had arisen from their protesting the Vietnamese war—the fairness and the constitutionality of the University's judicial procedure. This time not only SDS, but also IFC protested against what they considered an unfair and illegal judiciary process.

In March, SDS went before the Central Student Court, defying the proceeding by bringing their own legal counsel. When their lawyer tried to speak, he was silenced. Finally the defendants decided the court was a mockery of justice and walked out in protest. The Court decided to give the defendants a reprimand which would be recorded in their files and gave them warning concerning any other incidents. The next step SDS took was to appeal their case to the Faculty Senate committee on disciplinary action. SDS plans to continue to act in behalf of their ideals and to urge the University to think about important issues.

La Boheme

When La Boheme opened at the Fine Arts Theatre, the audience found an emphasis on drama as well as music.

Director William C. Winden in keeping with current trend in opera production emphasized acting to make the production a complete theatre experience not just a musical representation. Winden has a degree in opera production from Stanford University.

The opera which was presented in English has a very strong story line and well developed characters. Enacted by the Music Department and produced by the University Theatre, this story of Bohemian life in Paris, 1830, blends the romantic and realistic. In this way it typifies Puccini's mastery of the opera melodrama.

The Visit

The University Theater touched the experimental field as the players presented Duerrenmatt's tragi-comedy The Visit.

U.T. Director Roger Meersman explained that the group was utilizing a theatrical style called the Theatre of Cruelty. The chief apostle of this particular style has been Antonin Artaud, a French theorist, who believed that true theatre disturbs the senses' repose and frees the repressed unconscious.

"The Theatre of Cruelty is cruel in that it forces men to see themselves as they are: it causes the mask to fall, reveals the lies by which men live and demonstrates their baseness, slackness and hypocrisy," explained Meersman.

Original music for the production was written by Stewart Gordon of the University's Department of Music. Choreography was done by Dr. Dorothy Madden, Head of the Dance Department.

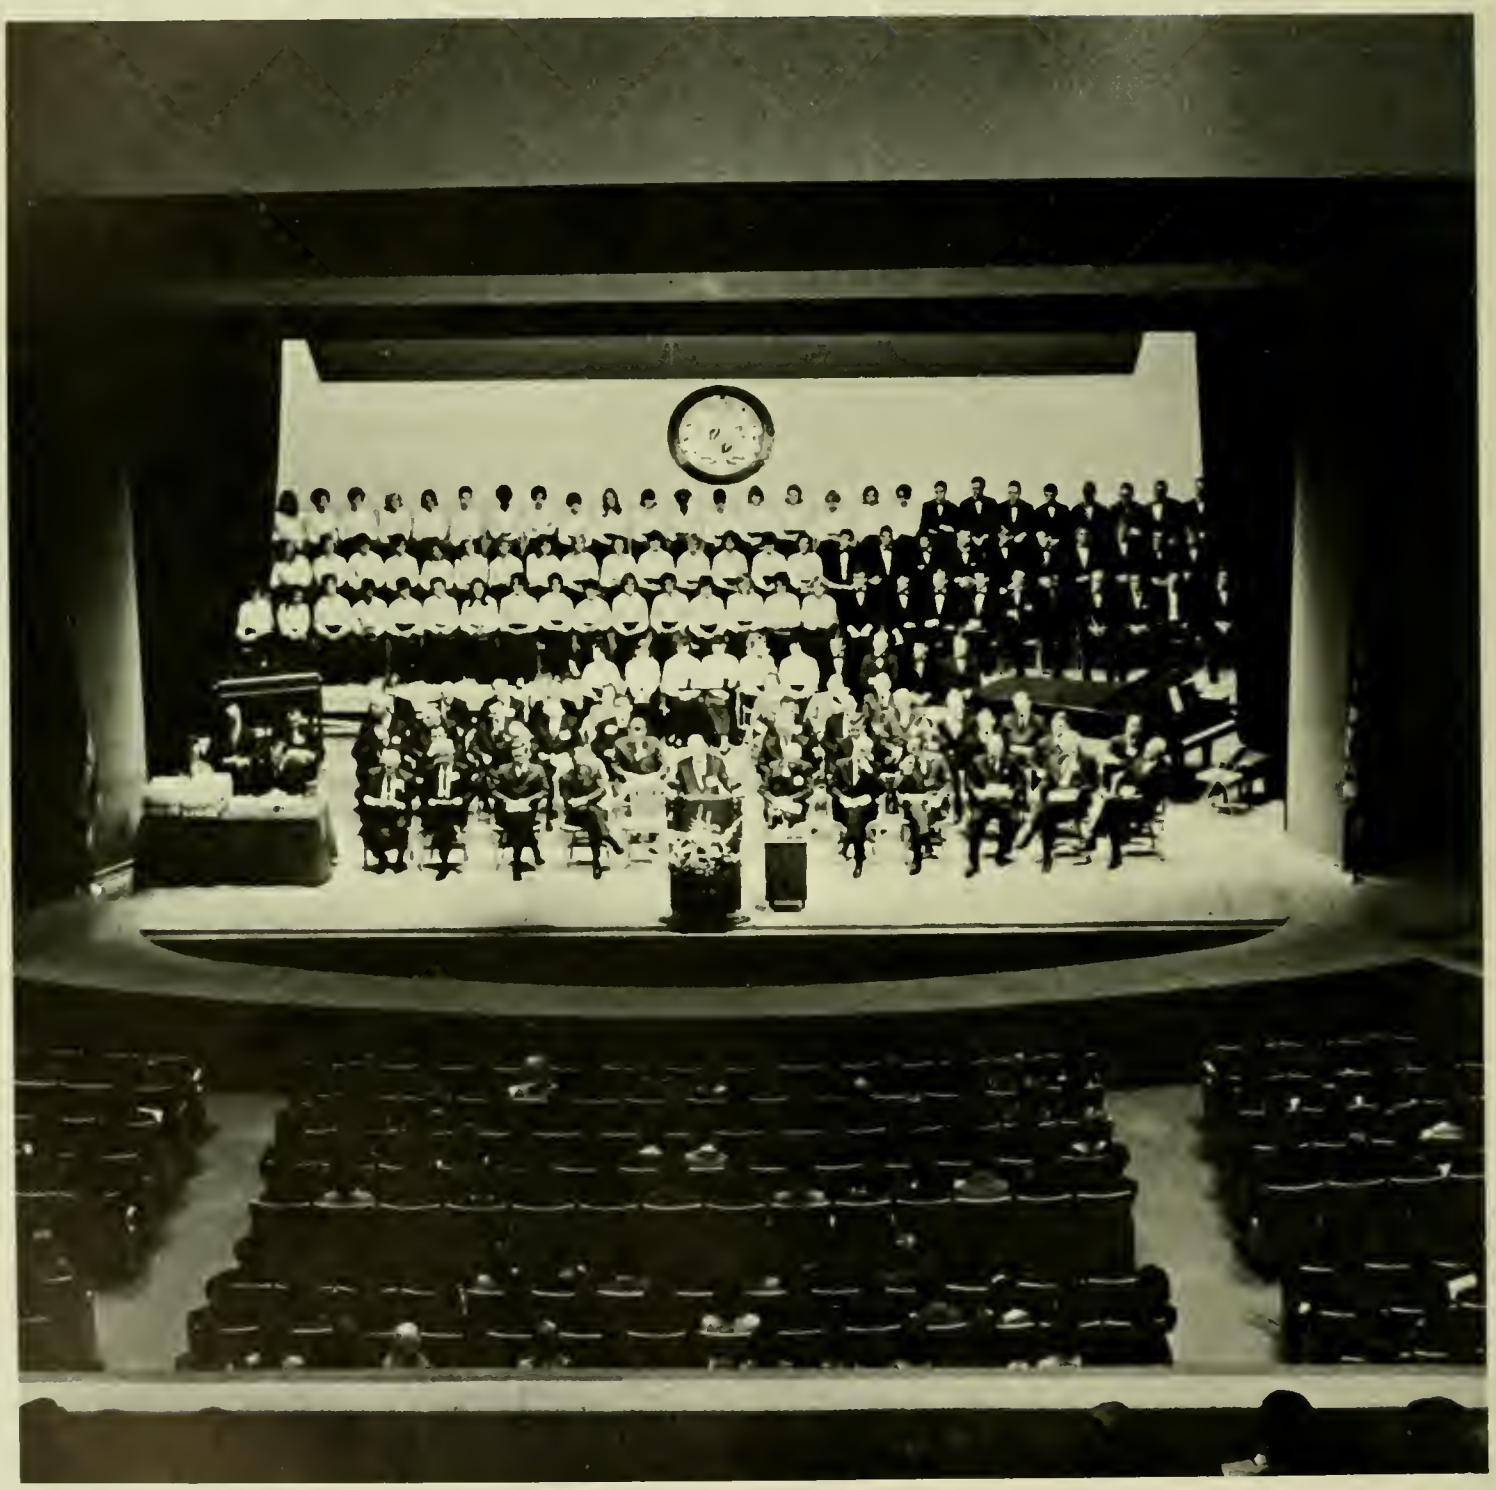
excellence in teaching



On November 17, for the second time, the University presented excellence in teaching awards to ten outstanding members of the faculty. University President Wilson H. Elkins conferred the awards, consisting of certificates of recognition and checks for $1,000.00 at an honors convocation held in the Tawes Fine Arts Center. All ten are assistant professors.

Dr. Lloyd H. Elliot, president of George Washington University spoke on "The Commitment of the Expert."

680 university students who achieved a cumulative average of 3.5 or better for the previous year also received certificates of scholarship in recognition of their academic achievement.

Sammy Davis, Jr.

by Carl Tretter

If there is anyone in all of show business that can hold an audience's attention for an hour and a half, it is Sammy Davis, Jr.

Without any intermission, Sammy showed his amazing versatility; singing seventeen songs, mimicking fifteen different personalities, telling a number of jokes, gags, and asides, doing a tap-dancing routine to each section of the large crowd in Cole, and even giving a fast-draw exhibition which might have made Billy The Kid blush.

While strapping on his gun and holster, Sammy grinned and remarked: ". . . you just don't find many colored Jewish cowboys around today. . ."

When reaching the end of "What Kind of Fool Am I", Sammy muffed the last note. He stopped the show and said: "That was a very bad note. You have paid to hear me do my best, that wasn't my best, so I'll do that last part again." This time, he belted the note to every corner of the field house, to long applause. This is the Sammy Davis, Jr., "Mr. Wonderful."

Victorians and Puritans found outrageous goings-on at the armory when Campus Chest held its annual College Casino night. Roulette wheels and go-go girls kept the crowd spinning for an interesting evening and a worthy cause.

This year's Campus Chest events earned well over the goal of 4000 dollars. The money is donated to various charities including Care, Heart Fund, Project Hope and various Cancer and Cerbral Palsy funds.

Malcolm Boyd at Maryland

A Priest In Touch

by Ellen Kurtz

It's Thursday afternoon, Lord. Here's that light and sound all over again. I've got to move fast . . . to the University of Maryland, Lord. Got to wash up, grab a bite to eat and run some more.

The Reverend Malcolm Boyd may indeed have contemplated this modification of his favorite poem as he headed to the University of Maryland Student Union, December first, 1966. Boyd's appearance was part of the Contemporary Culture in Religious Perspective series.

Boyd is no ordinary preacher. He doesn't need a church pulpit to deliver a sermon. "Religion must go where the people are," Boyd says. "It should speak an everyday language in everyday places . . . in the theater, in films, in folk-singing, in jazz; on campuses, in nightclubs, on freedom rides and in the mainstream centers of life as well."

photographed by Ken Firestone

The Episcopal priest travels widely to meet people. As minister-at-large to colleges and universities, Boyd visits more than one hundred campuses each year. In October, a stool at San Francisco's "hungri i" nightclub became his pulpit.

Boyd's book of prayers entitled Are You Running With Me, Jesus?, has captured national attention. His message is intensely personal and filled with concern for human problems. Julius Duscha, of Stanford University says of Boyd, "His subjects are as contemporary as racial relations and traffic jams, but he is also deeply concerned with the loneliness and mystery of life and man's inhumanity to man." As Boyd has explained, "You must judge a man by what his life, is, not by his words."

Guitar player, Charlie Byrd, accompanied Reverend Boyd's reading as he has in several other public performances. Byrd is well known as a versatile musician. He has appeared as a jazz performer at Washington's Showboat Lounge, and as a classical artist with the National Symphony.

Computers look to the future

The Computer Science Center is indeed becoming the center for many University programs.

The Center was established in February 1962 as an interdisciplinary department, not affiliated with a specific school or college. Much of its workload comes from undergraduate courses in BPA, Electrical Engineering and other computer related colleges. Many A and S students have also become aware of the Center on receiving back their computer-graded exams.

September 1966 welcomed the new director of the Computer Science Center, Dr. William F. Atchison, former head of the Dick Electronic Computer Center at Georgia Tech. Dr. Atchison places special importance on the currently developing graduate program for which approval is anticipated before the 1967-68 academic year.

Six undergraduate courses dealing directly with computer science have been initiated by the Center as well as informal courses for groups of faculty members and selected graduate students.

At present the Center occupies the first floor of what will be eventually a four-story building devoted entirely to research and education on computer science. Two experimental remote control stations are currently set up at the Center with hopes that similar stations will eventually be built throughout the campus.

This Is The Coach That Was

by Stan Goldberg

The Lou Saban era began suddenly at Maryland when the former Coach of the Year in the American Football League retired from the Buffalo Bills to take over the vacancy at Maryland. It ended just as suddenly when he quit Maryland to go to Denver after stating that he could not build winning football at Maryland under the present football program.

In between, he switched Alan Pastrana from linebacker to quarterback and made him one of the best in the ACC; made headlines when he kicked four stars off the team; built one of the best defenses in the ACC and finished with a 4-6 record.

When Saban came to Maryland it was with the idea of building up teams equal to those of the Jim Tatum era. After the first six games he appeared to be doing just that as his team compiled a surprising 4-2 record, highlighted with a victory over Duke. From then on, it was down-hill as the Terrapins suffered loss after loss and Saban suffered a shoulder injury.

He created a lot of excitement until the final downfall. Right from the beginning, top prospects who planned to attend other colleges, decided to come to Maryland so they could work under Saban. During the spring drills he experimented over and over again—switching players from one position to another. With Pastrana he took a linebacker and tried him at quarterback where he was to star in the coming year.

The Terps under Saban had a dismal beginning when they lost to Penn State. Although he was criticized for the decision, it appeared to pay off as a new spirit took hold of the Terps. They won four of their next five games. The alumni came back, thinking of a new Tatum era.

But injuries and lack of depth began to tell during the end of a season. These, plus the lack of a running attack, made Pastrana the key man in the Terp line-up. The junior teamed with Bill Van Heusen, who Saban finally found a home for as a receiver, he lead the Terp offense.

Even with the dismal second half, hopes were high for the next season. Pastrana and Van Heusen would both be back along with some promising freshmen.

But Saban had been offered a half million dollars to sign a ten year contract with the Broncos. To the dismay of Terp fans, he accepted the offer, taking many of his assistants with him.

Before he left, Saban claimed that he could not build winning football at Maryland under the present program. Before departing, he had advised the school to get out of the ACC.

So the Saban era came to an end. Bob Ward was named the new coach. But if he did nothing else, Saban created a controversy. If he could not build winning football at Maryland under the present program how could anyone else? The days of Jim Tatum appear to be dead and with it the hopes of building winning football at Maryland.

Homecoming Luncheon

The Montgomery County Alumni join for their annual Oyster Roast.

Few undergraduates realize the wide range of festivities included in the Alumni Association's spring semester version of Homecoming. The Spring Reunion, held in May, attracted almost a thousand participants this year. Graduates from the classes of 1917 to 1952 joined in events including a bus tour guided by Angel Flight, a luncheon at the Adult Education Center and a LaCross game—Maryland vs Army.

From the class of 1927 comes the new president of the Association, Mylo S. Downey, who received a Bachelor degree in Agriculture and a Masters degree in Agriculture Education from the University. Downey was a former president of the Agricultural Alumni Chapter and has served as Assistant County Agent of Allegheny. After joining the Maryland State 4-H Staff in 1936, he was appointed to the 4-H and Youth Development Division of the Federal Extension Service, a division which he now heads. As Alumni president, Downey formulates a long-range Alumni program which includes keeping up-todate on University happenings.

Alumni members share more university events with students than those at Homecoming. Who in the cast of Annie Get your Gun can forget the on-stage theater party given by the Alumni Association? Alumni awards and scholarships also show Alumni recognition of other outstanding student achievements.

Homecoming

by Lisa Taylor

Homecoming 1966, wrapped up by the annual Homecoming Dance held in Reckord Armory, created a package of prizes, parties, and enthusiastic crowds.

Pride in a winning team, a beautiful float, and a queen for a date highlighted the whirlwind weekend of events.

Two weeks of active planning, hammering, and chicken wire stuffing fresh in the memories of participants, all transmitted an air of excited expectation as the competing floats, 39 strong, paraded around Byrd Stadium's track; each viewer selecting his choice of winning entries.

Delta Tau Delta and Delta Delta Delta won the Greek entry with "Testudo Signs His John Gamecock," a Declaration of Independence adaptation of the overall Homecoming theme, "Terps Retrace Time."

First in the residence halls category was Chestertown A and B with Elkton, depicting "Terp Revolution," a guillotined gamecock under the master executioner, Testudo.

The Newman Center's "First Wheel Put to Good Use" scored first in the independent organizations category.

Float runners-up were Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Kappa Kappa Gamma's "Testudo Salutes Heroes of Freedom's Past" for the Greeks, and Prince Georges and Montgomery Center's "Terps Stoke the Gamecocks and Win the West" for residence halls.

Judges based their decisions on overall appearance, theme adaptation, originality, and workmanship.

University President Wilson H. Elkins crowned Gail Kleger of Alpha Epsilon Phi as College Park campus Homecoming Queen, and Joyce Fugii as queen of the Baltimore campuses.

Runners-up for Homecoming Queen at College Park were, in order, Sandy Rosencrantz of Kappa Delta; Janie Cronin of Anne Arundel Hall; Lani Feris of Carroll Hall; and Linda Lee Lanham of Delta Delta Delta.

The alumni poster contest, a new addition to this year's Homecoming created by Mary Jo DeMatteis, gave firsts to Gamma Phi Beta sorority, and Prince Georges Hall.

Reckord Armory, decorated with posters of Testudo as various historical figures—from "Testudostone" to "Testudonaut"—received a capacity crowd entertained by the Cyrcle and Ruby and the Romantics.

Homecoming 1966, as tradition prescribes, was indeed, a weekend to remember; awaking memories of college years past, while establishing those for the future.

Harry Belafonte

by Ellen Kurtz

Internationally famous singer Harry Belafonte highlighted the school year's first Interfraternity Council Presents production, in October.

Belafonte's entourage included a new singing discovery from Greece, Nana Mouskari, as well as one of the most articulate comedians in show business, Nipsey Russell.

The show, which was a distinct success, attracted an audience of 13,000 to Cole Field House or "Noah's Ark" as Belafonte called it. The evening opened with familiar negro spirituals Look Over Yonder and Glory Manger, soulful religious melodies. Belafonte's intense concentration combined with a purity of sound enriched these selections.

Comedian Russell managed to keep the audience in stitches with witty "in" comments like, "I was a freedom runner, I didn't wait for the bus," and Miss Mouskari, who has the uncanny ability to sing in most European languages, almost stole the show.

Belafonte returned to the stage with much contemporary material drawn from his infinitely varied repertoire. "I want to sing songs of every day, not just of an era that is gone," he said. "I want to be able to sing songs that reflect reality and truth"—and he did.

McKeldin

"In this building a spirit has been given proud and worthy residence . . . the spirit that is the true bequest of our day of Plato, Aristotle, and Thomas Jefferson and of the large and truly humor minds of the past . . . the essential spirit of the university." So said Vernon W. Clopp at the dedication of the new University of Maryland library on the third of May, 1958. Named in honor of Governor Theodore R. McKeldin, the University library opened on January sixth of the next year. Today it stands at the center of the campus and is the principal library unit. Annexes are found in the Chemistry, Math and Physics buildings, Medical and Law branches are found on the Baltimore campus. The McKeldin library seats 2,000 people and has a shelving capacity of 1,000,000 volumes. The building cost approximately two and a half million dollars.

Governor McKeldin once said that the library "is the only place on campus where everything is relevant." In addition to the facilities which most students are familiar such as those in Reference, Fine Arts, Social Science and Technology, there are many services of which most students are unaware. The Juvenile collection, Bibliography room, Map room, Curriculum laboratory, Microfilm room, Maryland and rare books room are several examples. There are also seminar and typing rooms.

Thomas Jefferson's comment that "the field of knowledge is the common property of mankind" is found engraved in the facade of the library. This seems to express the feelings of many people who have contributed to the library collection. Among the more well known contributors are Dr. Mansueti, who gave the library over 20,000 books and periodicals on Oceanography, Herpatology and basic science, and former congressman Carlton Sickles who has contributed personal papers, files, legislation on various government projects and campaign files. Except for some of the personal papers these acquisitions are open to interested students. There are also political papers which belonged to Joseph C. Tydings. Pulitzer prize winning novelist Katherine Anne Porter has given her personal library of over 60,000 volumes to the McKeldin library. This includes manuscripts, lecture notes, letters, photographs and personal papers. An expert on rare books claims that this was "a unitial collection for all research on twentieth century American writing which reflects all facets of the contemporary literary scene in this country and abroad."

The second inscription on the facade of the library is by Thomas Carlyle. "In books lies the soul of the whole past time." Indeed the students of this University have a great opportunity to discover what this soul is.

The Dairy:

From Moo . . .

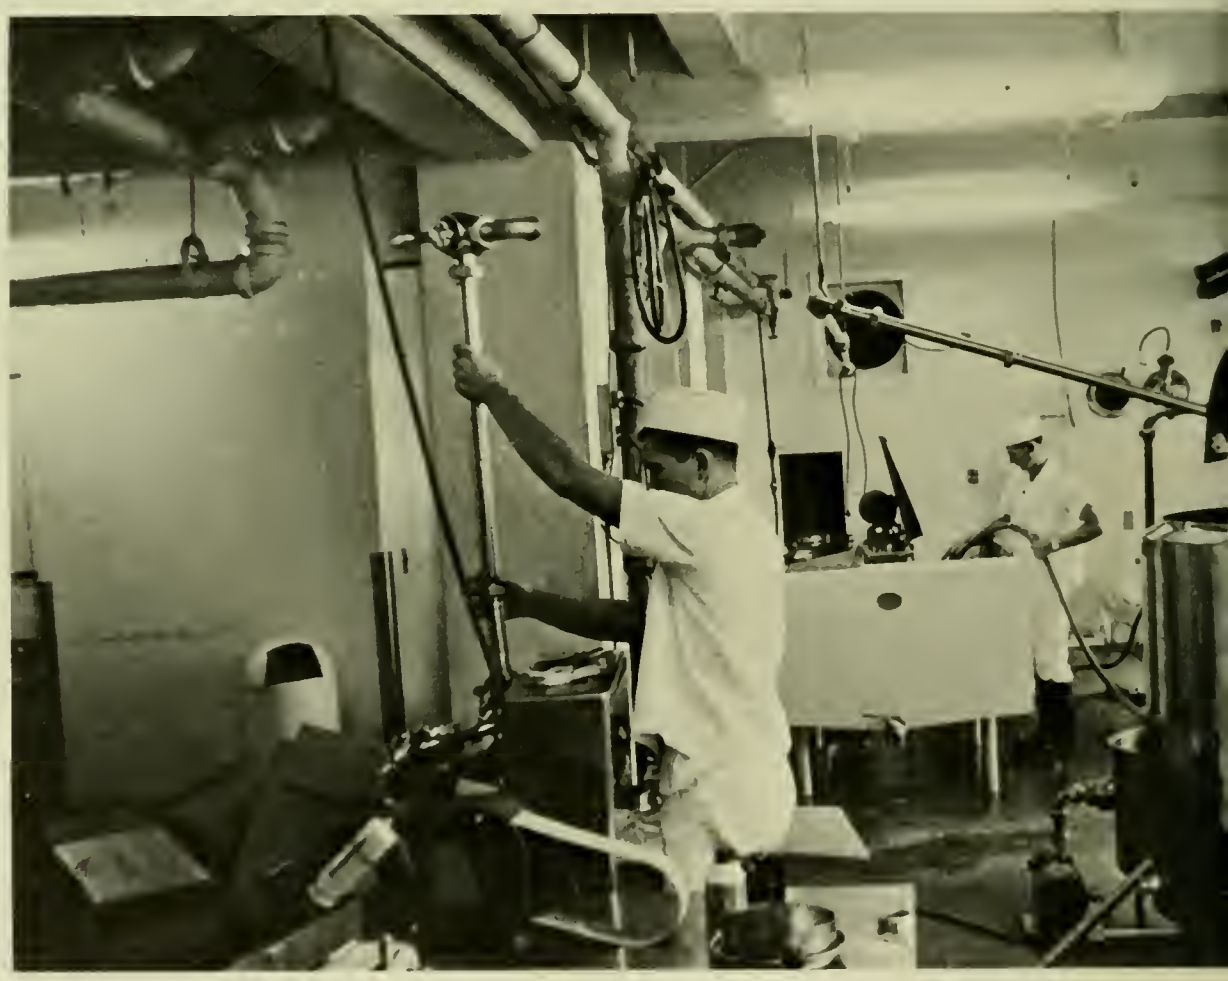
. . . to You

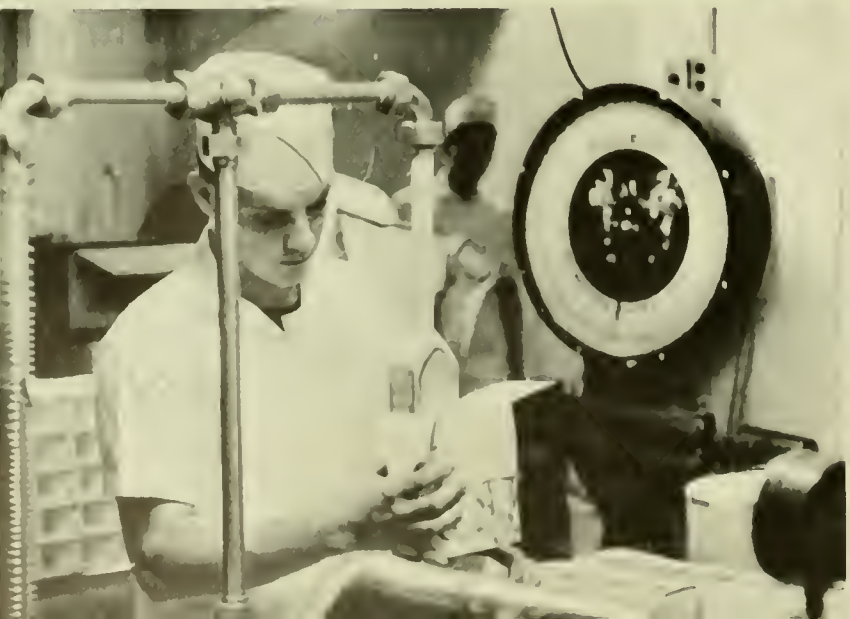
by Dick Stoll

Located on the forearm of the University of Maryland campus is a stunted looking redbrick building known as the University Dairy. Reverberating from its submissive appearance is its renown reputation in quantity and quality of ice cream. With facilities equivalent to a modern commercial market-milk and ice cream operation, the Dairy serves not only the University students but also the dairy farmers within the state and the general public. Products are under strict control by county and state inspectors as well as University officials.

The dairy facilities are intended primarily for research, teaching, and extensive activities however non-students of agriculture also partake in bacteriological studies and merchandizing problems. Besides aiding and abetting the dairy's production of edible merchandise, the University's herd of seventy milking animals are also used for research. The University not only employs cows looking for a college education but also provides an opportunity for students to work while going to school.

photographed by Karl W. Sanger





People from all over flock to buy the dairy's ice cream. By working closely with the Department of Agriculture and the school's department of Horticulture, the dairy has been able to produce via scientific experiments such novel flavors as sweet potato, persimmon, rhubarb, and merigold which were exhibited at the Maryland Pavilion at the New York World's Fair. What makes the ice cream so delicious is the fresh fruit products used instead of artificial flavoring. To "coin" a phrase from one of the University's Phi Beta Kappa cows, 'the Dairy functions as a community service to promote University rapport from Moo to You.'

Registration

by Ruth Wagner

The bi-annual ritual called registration became a perpetual topic of conversation for students and administrators this year. It was impossible to deny the fact that improvement is needed.

Walter Waltjen, vice president for administrative affairs announced that President Elkins was appointing a committee to re-evaluate registration procedures. The committee would consider registration procedures used at other universities. One result of such research occurred at spring registration when students were asked to list their social security numbers, which will eventually be used as I. D. numbers.

Besides complaints about misinformed advisors and mix-ups in matching housing and admissions cards, many problems concerning impersonal attitudes and procedures were brought to campus-wide focus.

Editorial suggestions were also in abundance. One proposed an extended deadline for dropping a course. It was noted that many universities, including Johns Hopkins, use this policy so that a student can better evaluate his efforts.

Student Union

by Michael Dodd

The purpose of the Student Union is to complement the students' educational experience by presenting programs to stimulate ideas and discussion, and by offering worthwhile leisure activities. In order to perform these functions the Student Union employs over 80 people, including part-time student help.

To aid in rounding out the students' cultural background, numerous guest speakers have appeared as part of the Student Union programs. Among them were Sargent Shriver, the late Gus Grissom, Professor Teller, and members of the Russian Embassy in Washington. Every two weeks, the Student Union provides a Classical Film Series which presents outstanding films of our time. Also available for student use are private rooms where students can practice individually with musical instruments. There is a Fine Arts Room which displays paintings by both students and faculty. The new Student-Faculty Coffee Hour was recently created to provide an informal contact with the faculty on mutually interesting topics.

For students' relaxation and entertainment are provided weekend movies, dances, modern bowling and billiard facilities and the Spotlight Series which brings famous names in the entertainment world to the campus. These events are planned by the Student Union Board which is made up entirely of students and serves as a liaison between the student body and the Union director. Over 8,000 students pass through the Union doors each school day. Their interest in the Union is reflected in the 325 student organizations and clubs that use the Union as their headquarters and meeting place. To cater to these organizations and activities, there are sixteen rooms available for meetings, lectures, and other group gatherings. In order to keep up with the ever-increasing enrollment, the Student Union administration has planned for completion in 1970 the addition of a theatre, outdoor patio on the second floor and several more meeting rooms.

House Without A House

photographed by Gene Boyars

Miss Polly Adler, a housemother whose brood worked out of towns other than College Park, did not have Phi Epsilon Pi fraternity in mind when she remarked, "A house is not a home," but she was not far from the point.

The Phi Eps have had neither a house not a home since the Beta Theta chapter was founded at Maryland in 1962. They have been forced, instead, to live in dormitories, apartments or their own nearby homes and to hold meetings in classroom buildings on campus.

The Phi Eps have had brief quarters, but they've had nothing permanent and nothing at all in the last two years.

In 1963-64, Maryland's wanderers rented an apartment building endearingly called the "Cluse Arms," but they left shortly to live in a temporarily vacated fraternity house.

As the University is unable to provide housing due to the closing of its endowment fund, the search for a house goes on.

R. O. T. C: Looking to the Wild Blue

by Lisa Taylor

Throughout history, nations once strong have grown weak and, in time, fallen prey to stronger ones—the cycle repeats even today.

The citizens of the United States enjoy the most advanced civilization in the world, but other nations with different ideologies vie for similar power and prosperity. To keep our society free, we must be strong; militarily, politically, economically, and physically. Air Force ROTC at the University of Maryland, as well as Army, Navy, and Air Force ROTC units at other colleges and universities, is designed to maintain this strength. The ROTC programs do this by training college students to become officers of the reserve forces in our military establishment. The reserve forces have been the backbone of our military strength since the first "citizen soldier" in the American Revolution.

While striving to achieve a high caliber of officer quality, the cadet strives to achieve just as high a caliber as a gentleman. The social aspect of military life is actually an integral part of the life of an ROTC cadet.

Part of the Wing social functions include the Flight Orientation Program base visitations. During these visits, cadets become better acquainted with their future fellow officers.

This year the detachment officers organized trips to the State Department and the NASA Space Flight Center, attended by cadets and Angels. Membership in one of the three special organizations in the corps provides additional opportunity for comradeship among cadets and social contact with the Angels.

The major corps social functions are the Military Ball (fall semester) and the Arnold Air Society/Detachment Dining-In (Spring semester).

The Military Ball was held on Nov. 11, 1966, in the Skyroom of the Bolling Air Force Base Officer's Open Mess. The Dining-In, a formal dinner for the members of the Arnold Air Society, Wing Staff, and detachment officers, was held at the Fort George G. Meade Officer's Open Mess on March 3, 1967.

Commuters

Commuting Can Be Fun

Overcoming the daily trials of traveling to and from school, the university commuters once more braved the snow-covered roads, the car-filled highways and the congested parking lots. More than ever, the commuters were given a chance to become a part of campus life.

The University Commuter's Association provided many services of great benefit to the traveling student. At the beginning of the year, carpools were formulated through the aid of the club. Services such as providing students with the best bus routes to school were also available. During Freshman Orientation Week, the organization planned open-houses for incoming freshman commuters and new students.

The U.C.A. also represented the commuters in university politics. The President and Vice-President of the association both held membership on the Student Government Association Cabinet.

Several important social functions were sponsored this year by the U.C.A. Highlighting them all was the Play Boy Ball. The Commuter's Den, in the Student Union, furnished an informal atmosphere in which commuters could come to eat, study or mingle with friends.

Commuter women were given a chance this year to participate in the Dorm-Affiliation Program. Through this program, the commuter could become a "temporary resident." She could take part in the dorm's many activities, while she visited her new "on campus" friends. This program, sponsored by the A.W.S. was held in addition to the Big Sister Program which exists to provide Freshman commuters with an upperclassman's help during the first hectic days of college life.

Coed Commuter

The acute shortage of campus housing at the University of Maryland has given rise to a new breed of commuters—the apartment dwellers. From Adelphe to Greenbelt, from Hyattsville to College Park the apartment dwellers set up a temporary home for a year with their own small family of roommates.

Living near campus and away from home leaves the computer with more time for school responsibilities. It also takes him less traveling time if he sets up housekeeping in an area immediately adjacent to campus.

Donna Dye has been an apartment dweller for two semesters. Currently she and her roommate Jan are staying in Langley Park—a ten minute drive from the University. Donna must get up by 6:30 in order to make her eight o'clock class. This leaves her time to dress and prepare breakfast. She also explained that "in order to find a parking space in lot 3 it is necessary to leave a little earlier."

When Donna's classes are over in the afternoon she spends her time running errands, cleaning house and shopping for food. Since cooking is one of Donna's favorite hobbies she usually prepares the dinner, but "no matter which meal it is—or who is cooking, we have an unwritten agreement that one prepares and the other does the cleaning up," she explained.

Evenings are spent going to activity meeting and studying for her history major. This year Donna has been vice president of the Free State Party, Banquet Chairman of the Junior Prom, Chairman of publicity for the Student Union Board, a member of the Election Board and a member of the University Commuters Association.

On the weekend Donna goes to the fraternity parties of her pinmate and sometimes even has parties in her apartment—"one great convenience over a dorm room."

Donna feels that apartment living is an important experience. "Aside from being fun it makes you responsible for yourself and considerate of others," she pointed out. "It also makes you appreciate home just a little bit more."

Football

Football at Maryland in 1966 featured a new head coach who shuffled in from Buffalo and then off to Denver, a record-breaking defensive letterman at quarterback, and the return home of a Terp All-American. Coach Lou Saban, former Buffalo Bills coach, installed Alan Pastrana at quarterback, and Maryland finished with a 4-6 record. But at the end of the year Saban resigned to join the Denver Broncos, and the head coaching chores fell to one of the greatest players in Terp football history, Bob Ward.

Coach Saban, who said later that he had never seen a safety scored against one of his teams, saw enough of them in his Maryland debut to last him a lifetime. Penn State piled up three of them, plus a touchdown and a field goal, to down the Terps, 15-7. Ernie Torain gained fifty yards in ten carries for Maryland, including a 15-yard touchdown scamper.

But the shock of the week was not the Maryland loss. Dubbing Phil Petry, Whitey Marciniak, Ron Nalewak, and Lorie McQueen "not good enough to play for Maryland," Saban dishonorably discharged the four seniors from the team.

Maryland's home opener was also Band Day, and the Terps played a merry tune all afternoon, walloping Wake Forest, 34-7. The Deacons were held to 130 yards offensively by the tough Maryland defense. John Hetrick recovered two fumbles directly leading to touchdowns, and he and Jim Lavruskey picked off Wake Forest passes. Meanwhile, Pastrana threw three scoring passes, including 48 and 49-yard bombs to Ernie Torain. Torain also scored a third touchdown on a short run. A non-scoring 50-yard completion, Pastrana to Ralph Donofrio, set a Maryland record.

The first of eight straight victories for Gator Bowl-bound Syracuse occurred the next week at Maryland's expense, 28-7. Keyed to stopping the Orange's great Floyd Little, the Maryland defense was stunned by four touchdown passes by Syracuse quarterback Jim Del Gaizo, who was starting his first college game. Not that Little did nothing—he caught one touchdown pass, breaking Ernie Davis' Syracuse scoring record, and gained 118 yards, in contrast to Maryland's —45.

And then odd things began to happen, things no one at Maryland, including Saban, was expecting. Maryland won three consecutive games and was listed as a contender for a bowl berth.

RUGGED ACTION

Overcoming a 12-0 deficit, the Terps thrilled a home crowd of 28,400 by dropping an undefeated Duke team, 21-19. Pastrana connected on 11 of 18 throws for 181 yards. His cohort in victory was Billy Van Heusen, who snared five aerials for 104 yards. Maryland had a bit of trouble stopping the Devil's Dave Dunaway, who tied an ACC record with eleven receptions, but led by Lou Stickel, who intercepted two passes, the defense preserved the win.

It was West Virginia's turn next, and Maryland's linemen bullied the weaker Mountaineers on the way to a 28-9 victory, despite 138 yards rushing by the visitor's Garrett Ford. Sophomore fullback Bill Lovett, behind the crisp blocking of Tom Cichowski, accumulated 140 yards as the Terps mounted their best rushing attack of the season, 223 yards altogether. Not to be forgotten, Pastrana hit on six of nine passes for 130 yards, including touchdown throws of 15 and 44 yards to Van Heusen and Rick Carlson, respectively. For Saban, it was a bittersweet victory: his collarbone was broken when a Maryland tackler blindsided him on the sidelines.

A Homecoming crowd of 35,400 saw a tremendous effort by the Terp defensive unit as Maryland struggled by South Carolina, 14-2. Down 2-0 in the third period, cornerback Tony Santy intercepted a pass for Maryland. Three plays later Van Heusen went 67 yards with a Pastrana pass to put the Terps in the lead. Bobby Collins, who had a spectacular day returning punts, with runbacks of 34, 37, and 49 yards, caught a five-yard pass for Maryland's other score. A sidelight was the first two-sport day of Chilean Bernardo Bramson, the team's soccer-style place kicker. After a morning soccer game, Bramson switched uniforms and kicked two extra points. After the triumph, the Terps held a 4-2 season record and the Atlantic Coast Conference lead with a 3-0 mark.

The beginning—of the end for all of Maryland's hopes and dreams—a winning season, a Conference championship, a bowl bid—came in the next game, a 24-21 heartbreak loss to N.C. State. The Wolfpack held a 24-0 lead with but six minutes left to play. In the next 114 seconds, a fumble recovery by Ron Pearson and a successful onside kick by Bernardo Bramson enabled Pastrana to hurl three touchdown passes—of 41 and 36 yards to Van Heusen and 56 yards to Collins. But it was midnight for Maryland's Cinderella quarterback. Pastrana fumbled the next time the Terps had the ball and State ran out the clock. Saban, disturbed by the officiating, called it "the worst I've seen."

Maryland's chance of a Conference title disappeared in a 14-10 home loss to Clemson the following week. Frustration was the name of the game as the Terps penetrated the Tiger 25-yard line five times and scored but twice. Van Heusen played another excellent game, grabbing six passes for 88 yards. Clemson's Buddy Gore rolled up 119 yards rushing to aid Frank Howard to his 150th coaching victory.

Away Day at Virginia was a debacle. The handkerchiefs brought for cheers were used for tears instead as the Cavaliers humiliated the Terp's proud defensive unit, 41-17. Bob Davis, the ACC Player of the Year, completed six of nine passes for two touchdowns, but the day belonged to Frank Quayle, who set a Conference record by gaining 221 yards in 25 carries. Pastrana broke the Conference record for touchdown passes by throwing his 13th and 14th ones of the season.

The Terps spent their Thanksgiving weekend having the stuffing knocked out of them again, 45-21, by Florida State. Pastrana, who did not start because of an injury, came off the bench to throw three more touchdown passes, two of them to Van Heusen.

It was in the middle of December that Saban left for greener (an estimated $500,000 ten-year job) pastures, with three years left on his Maryland contract. After deliberating for two weeks, a committee selected Bob Ward, an Army assistant coach, for the job.

While Ward loses such standouts as Bramson, Collins, Fred Cooper, Cichowski, and Dick Absher, an All-ACC pick, he retained a nucleus of good players. Jim Lavrusky, who captained the second best defensive unit in the Conference, will return, as will Bill Lovett, who gained 451 yards for a 4.6 average. Pastrana will be back to try to break his Maryland records of 1499 yards passing and 17 touchdown throws, and he will be aided by Van Heusen, who snared 25 passes, seven for touchdowns, tying a Terp record. If it's all put together, and a little luck is added, maybe next year. . . .

Cross-Country

Maryland's cross-country team powered its way through a second consecutive undefeated season in 1966 and climaxed it with a third straight ACC Championship. Coached by former Terp middle-distance star Jim Kehoe, the harriers, noted for their poise and teamwork, utilized their superior depth in fine distance runners to overwhelm opponents.

North Carolina, Maryland's major opposition for the conference title, lost its only dual meet of the season when the Terps took over after an early Tar Heel lead and went ahead to win 15 to 49 at Chapel Hill.

Victory over the United States Naval Academy is top priority for Maryland cross-country teams, and this year's edition of the annual classic turned into a strategic battle for low scoring points. Having the advantage of the home course, Navy's Buz Lawlor and Jim Dare copped first and second as expected, but the Terps' balanced running attack scuttled the Academy's bid for an addition to their win column.

Maryland's harriers also topped their closest competitors, Quantico, 19 to 45 to retain their District of Columbia AAU Championship.

The Terp runners capped their undefeated season with the ACC crown, and neither the difficult University of South Carolina course nor the 48 runners from the seven other conference schools bent on revenge could halt Maryland's seven-man team in the championships at Columbia. With Matthews taking a third overall in the meet, the rest of the squad finished in the top fifteen. Jim Kehoe, in his twenty-first season as head coach, received the cross-country championship plaque for the third year in a row as each member of the winning team brought back a gold medal to Maryland.

Senior Milt Matthews was the No. 1 man for Maryland's harriers this year as he led the Terps over the finish line in every outing. The wiry New Jerseyian, who runs well at any distance from the quarter to the two-mile, established himself as an excellent cross-country performer.

George Henry, the Maryland course record-holder and 1965 ACC individual cross-country champion, spent most of his final season recovering from an extended illness which cost the native of Elkton, Virginia, most of his junior outdoor season. But the fastest Terp miler since Burr Grim still made valuable contributions with his third in the DCAAU and low scoring positions in the Navy and ACC meets.

Charlie Koester was the epitome of endurance and determination in his best season ever. The senior from Baltimore consistently outdistanced his teammates only to be caught at the finish by Matthews with his powerful kick. Fellow Terp Charlie Harris, the DCAAU six-mile champion, also completed a fine career at Maryland.

Soccer

Although beset by academic problems at the beginning of the year, the sophomore-dominated soccer team finished with a 7-2 record and its 14th straight Atlantic Coast Conference title.

Coach Doyal Royal had some satisfaction in the return of Bernardo Bramson after a two-year absence. Bramson had originally come to Maryland on a soccer scholarship and was one of the stars of the freshman team several seasons ago. But he gave up the sport for football until this year.

The Terps began easily enough by routing North Carolina State, 11-0. But after that, they had a rough time before edging tough Howard, 3-2. Maryland didn't come out as well in the third game of the year, against Navy.The always-troublesome Middies had few problems in beating the Terps 5-1 and handing them their first defeat of the season. An easy 9-0 win over George Washington followed the Navy loss and upped the record to 3-1. The Terps made it 4-1 by squeaking by Georgetown, 3-2. The team then met the tough North Carolina Tar Heels. The Carolina boys gave Maryland a scare, before the Terrapins finally pulled away with a 2-1 win. Following a 1-1 tie with Penn State, Maryland was routed by Army, 6-0. The Cadets, who along with Navy consistently have one of the best soccer teams, had little trouble against the youthful Terp squad.

Maryland then finished the season with successive wins over Duke and Virginia for the ACC title. The Terps also extended their string of ACC wins to 54 straight without a loss.

Bernardo Bramson and Rusty Kindratiw led all season scorers with nine goals each. Dennis Casey, who scored all his goals in the first game of the season followed with four. Maurice White and Thomas Stout were next with three goals each. Alvaro Bitencourt led in assists with four. Stout was next with three and King had two for the Terrapins.

Next year Coach Royal hopes to improve his record and include among his victories Army and Navy.

Basketball

The central cog slipped out of a seventeen year Maryland basketball operation late in March when H. A. "Bud" Millikan stepped down as head coach and assistant athletic director.

With pressure mounting from parts of the administration and the student body, Millikan's decision came swiftly, but not totally unexpectedly. He was immediately succeeded by Frank Fellows, who has been assistant basketball coach for the past six years.

There were those who greeted the departure with something less than grief, but for those who knew Millikan, the release from the athletic office came like a blow to the head or a message from the war department.

The coach's "image" was not good with those who knew him only as a name in print but, as one of his players remarked, "The only people that like him are those that know him—and they love the guy."

Millikan's career won-lost record was very respectable—his teams won better than 60 per cent of their games—but he leaves a superb off-court record.

Millikan was one of that rare breed of men who could be called totally honest—even to the point of personal hurt. In an age when college coaches are likely to promise—but hardly ever deliver—everything but a share of the gate receipts to prospective players, Millikan never stooped.

His players say that Millikan's frankness about conditions at Maryland were paramount in their coming here in the first place. As players under him, they knew the coach as a gentleman and a sound teacher of basketball.

Millikan had some standout teams—one captured the ACC championship, several others finished second or third, and there were a number of tournament championships—but in the 1960's his teams had trouble getting beyond the first round of the conference play-offs.

This year's team finished with an 11-14 record, including a first round loss in the tourney, but there were some compelling moments over the course of the season.

Certain pictures of Millikan's last squad will be remembered long after their won-lost record will be forgotten: Gary Williams and Billy Jones stealing the ball from underneath some giant; Rich Drescher dunking the ball while an enemy draped himself about Drescher's shoulders; Pete Johnson leaping into the air, pausing there, then popping in a 20-footer; Joe Harrington clawing for rebound; Jay McMillen scoring again, then again.

Marked down at the start of the year as being strictly also-rans, the cagers shocked the entire basketball community by winning eight of their first 11 games and one mid-season tournament championship. With almost no depth on the squad, Millikan was forced to go with the same six or seven players each game, though, and the effects began to show.

A weary squad staggered home with only three wins in the final 14 outings, including heart-breaking losses to Duke and North Carolina at Cole Field House.

For four players—McMillen, Harrington, Williams and Mike De Cosmo—the 1966-67 season was an end to their college basketball careers, too.

McMillen finished his career with moments of brilliance—scoring feats surpassed only by Gene Shue, rebounding surpassed by no one on this year's quint. There were times—notably, against Penn State and North Carolina—when Jay was magnificent.

STATE
11

Against Penn State, in the opening game of the season, he scored 20 points and had 20 rebounds. In the last home game of his career, against nationally ranked Carolina, he scored 21 points in the first half. Lifetime, only Shue scored more points for Maryland.

Williams finished his stay at Maryland with his best campaign. The Terps' floor leader was surpassed in shooting percentage by only three other ACC players, but he will be remembered most for other feats.

Gary performed courageously in the face of full-court presses, hit the open man consistently, and he was Maryland's toughest defensive performer. At times, too, he was a shooter of surprising skill—he hit, for instance, on eight shots in eight tries against South Carolina and almost carried Maryland to victory.

Harrington finished his Maryland career on and off the bench and in and out of street clothes. Joe tore muscles in his knee in his junior year, after a splendid sophomore season, and this year the knee was slow coming around.

When he did play, with his leg heavily bandaged, Harrington had some heroic moments. His top performance was when it counted most—in the ACC tourney. He scored in double figures against South Carolina, despite playing after a long layoff.

DeCosmo, the good-natured back-court man, saw limited action this year. His best season was his soph campaign, when he averaged about six points a game. "Waxie" was one of the best ball-handlers on the squad.

The four seniors leave, then, with Bud Millikan, a sound tactician who turned out some fine basketball teams, but a man who will be remembered by his friends as an honest and dedicated gentleman.

1966-67 was an exciting year full of promise for the Maryland Matmen. Facing possibly the toughest schedule ever arranged for the "Wrestling Terps" who posted a mediocre 4-4 record in 1966, head coach "Sully" Krouse had little reason to be optimistic before the season began. There were key vacancies to fill. Outstanding competitors Olaf Drozdov, HVW and Amando Soto, 167 had been lost to graduation, and senior lettermen Kent Webster was out with an injury. But coach Krouse was never one to under sell his team. "We have a lot of sophomores," he said, "—and I think they're going to surprise some people."

The amazing Terrapin grapplers quickly established their coach a seer. With seven sophomores in their opening nine man lineup, the Krousemen stunned rugged Minnesota 17-12 in the season opener and crushed a supposedly strong V.M.I. mat squad 35-0 just twenty four hours later.

A pin by first year man Randy Umberger, 177 and a clutch victory by sophomore heavyweight Howard Zachmann were decisive in the win over the Gophers. Gobel Kline, 152 and Gary Blood, 160 also played key roles.

The high flying Terps ran into an experienced Army team next, and the Black Knights escaped with a 14-14 tie by scoring victories in the final two weight classes. Maryland controlled the meet, and Army never had the lead. Sophomore Jeff Paxton, 137 was a standout for the Terps in this one, decisioning Army's defending Eastern Champion Claude Johnson, 7-4.

Led by two time NCAA Champ Mike Caruso, 123 perennial Eastern champion Lehigh, 5th ranked nationally, jumped out to an early lead and managed to hand the Marylanders their first defeat of the season, 20-13 before a record crowd of more than 400. But the match could have gone either way. Engineer coach Gerry Leeman confessed he may have "underestimated" the young Terps. Four ties by Blood, 160, Kline, 152, Umberger, 177, and Zachmann, HVW, and a fall by Senior Captain Bob Karch accounted for the 13 Maryland points. Junior Keith Billote, 130 stood out in losing effort. Billote waged a fine battle against Lehigh's two time NCAA runnerup Joe Peritore before bowing 5-3.

Matched against a conference foe for the first time, the Terps trounced Virginia 40-3 thus giving strong indication that they would continue to dominate ACC competition. The Terps scored five falls in the meet. Virginia's John Shurberg, 130 won his 20th consecutive dual meet to account for the only Cavalier points. 115 and 191 lb. classes were added for this dual meet in the hope that the ACC would adopt them on a permanent basis. These weight classes are already used in tournament competition.

The nationally second ranked Cyclones of Iowa State, iiheaded by NCAA runnerup Vic Marcucci, and 6-4, 325 giant Ted Tuinstra, handed the grapplers their worst defeat of the season 20-8. Paxton, 137 and Umberger managed the only victories for the Krousemen. Gary Blood, 160 scored a draw. Larry Yocum wrestled well, but lost due to a shoulder injury after piling up a point advantage. The Cyclones have a national title and five second places to their credit in the last ten years under coach Harold Nichols. Several individual matches were close in this match, and the total effort was better than the score indicated.

The 1966-67 season marked the end of a successful career for team captain and two time ACC champion Bob Karch, 5-11, 167 who compiled a 17-9-0 record through his first three seasons. Through six matches this year he had a 4-2 record with two falls to his credit.

The freshman mat squad under head coach Tom Schleicher compiled a 1-1 record, losing a tough 16-14 decision to the Lehigh frosh and downing Stevens Trade 19-11. The frosh squad, loaded with state champions and other outstanding high school stars, showed considerable poise in their first two matches.

The history of wrestling at Maryland has been a successful one, and this year's sophomore dominated mat squad could have foreshadowed even better things to come. In their first six matches the grapplers demonstrated they could hold their own with the best in collegiate wrestling, compiling a 3-2-1 record against the roughest competition. They looked entirely capable of holding on to their ACC championship title, and gained considerable prestige nationally. Terp fans hope it is just the beginning.

Swimming

For Swimming Coach Bill Campbell, this was the year of his 100th career victory. Beginning the season with a win-lose record of 93-25, he led his primarily sophomore-junior squad through an excellent season.

Leading the tankers were Co-captains Bud Beatty and Doug Springer. Beatty was the Terps' point man in the distance freestyle events and often doubled in the individual medley. Springer was last year's recipient of the John T. Bell Award for the year's most outstanding swimmer. He is defending ACC Champion in the 200-yard breaststroke and was Eastern Regional finalist in that and in the individual medley events. Of the 11 pool records which the Terps seized on the road, Springer grabbed four of them.

Wayne Pawlowski combined with Springer to make the breaststroke events the Terps' strongest asset. He is defending ACC Champion in the 100-yard breaststroke.

Rounding out the freestyle arsenal was a triplet of sophomores. Mike Golub and his teammates, Morris Spitzer and Jim Martin, all showed great potential in this category.

Jim Hill, a junior, did well in the butterfly and long distance freestyle events. He was the triple winner of the marathon at VMI when he won the 1000-yard and 500-yard freestyle and the 200-yard butterfly. He also broke the pool record at AU with a 200-yard butterfly time of 2:09.4.

Hill's double in the butterfly events was senior Joe Wechsler. He had his best day against Villanova when he took a crucial second in the 200-yard butterfly.

Senior Bruce Phillips, "one of the most versatile swimmers in the ACC," and the Terps backstroker, lost only once on his back this fall. Phillips holds the varsity backstroke record of 2:03.3. The Terps' second backstroker is junior Dave Dodge.

Two more sophomores who came on strong in their varsity debut were butterflyer Dave Karol and distance freestyler Bob Sikorski. Both men found themselves in the distance freestyle events, usually side by side.

The diving events were especially strong this year with the return of ACC finalists Pat Morgan and Jack Jordan, and the arrival of sophomore sensation Dave Fox.

Lacrosse

Maryland's mighty lacrosse team enjoyed a 10-1 record in 1966. Under new head coach John Howard the Terps easily won the Atlantic Coast Conference championship.

The season opened with a 12-7 win over Princeton. Maryland was led by attackman Jack Heim, who scored seven points.

Heim starred again in the Terp's next triumph, a 19-5 rout of the Maryland Lacrosse Club. Five goals and five assists by Heim put the game out of reach.

Maryland outshot Brown, 78-28, in their next contest, to win 15-0. Brown goalie Dick Alder had a busy afternoon, compiling 30 saves.

Reserve goalie Bud DeHoust chalked up six saves to help the Terps whip Penn State. Following this, Maryland raised its record to 5-0 by crushing Baltimore University in a game played in a near whirlwind. The weather didn't seem to bother Alan Lowe, who led the Red and White with six assists and two goals.

In the biggest game of the year, the largest crowd ever to see a Maryland lacrosse game, 14,500, witnessed Navy's great Jimmy Lewis lead his team to an 11-9 win over the Terps.

Maryland came back to dump Duke, 19-5, and then have its defense, led by Alan Pastrana, completely dominate North Carolina. When the slaughter was over, the Terps owned an 18-0 victory.

Steve Lavaute and Heim scored in the final period to break a 6-6 tie against Army in the Terp's next match. Maryland went on to wrap up an 11-7 triumph.

Wrapping up the season, Maryland defeated neighboring Virginia and John Hopkins.

Baseball

It took five long years, but the 1966 season made a believer out of varsity baseball coach "Jack" Jackson. The loss of Jerry Bark and Brad Frost convinced Jackson that pitching is the name of the game.

Without the pair of aces that led the Terps to the NCAA regionals the year before, Jackson turned to senior Chris Sole and a trio of right-handed sophomores. As it turned out, Sole, a southpaw from Frederick, started only four games and failed to go any distance in any of them.

The leader of the "sophomore set," Mark Harris, was the only real surprise that Jackson could point to in reviewing the season. Harris, who pitched his high school in Overlea, led the staff in complete games (3), innings pitched (51), wins (4), and ERA with a 1.59 mark.

George Manz, the second member of Jackson's sophomores, finished the year with a 3.11 ERA and led all pitchers in innings pitched (55) and strikeouts (51).

The third member of the "kiddie corps," Frank BonVardo, was actually the only sophomore Jackson expected to step into the starting rotation. However, the "Blazer" had control problems as he surrendered 20 walks in 14 innings.

The only moundsman to finish with a perfect record was the Terps' fireman, Winnie Prange, who wound up with a 2-0 slate and a 1.59 ERA.

Among the bright spots in the hitting department, the brightest was Danny Kerns, who had a .359 average. Maryland's only other .300 hitter was firstbaseman Larry Davis, while leading the Terps in runs scored and RBIs with 18 and 22 respectively. Davis and senior Bill Seidling tied for first place in the home-run derby with three apiece.

Although Steve Sauve was Maryland's third leading hitter with a mediocre .244 average, his value does not lie in the batting column. In addition to his innate qualities of leadership, Sauve has proven himself to be one of the greatest defensive catchers ever to play in Shipley Field.

Also, defensively, the keystone combination of shortstop Jerry Kremer and second baseman Skip Rogosky pulled off a total of 13 double plays and looked like seasoned veterans in their first year with the varsity.

An 11-12 record was just about what Coach Jackson expected from a unit composed mostly of sophomores, playing most of their games on foreign sites, using untested pitching. It was a frustrating season, but it made Jackson a believer.

The 1965-1966 indoor and outdoor track teams compiled what had to be the most successful year in Maryland track history. Not only did they run away with the indoor and outdoor ACC titles for the eleventh straight year, they also garnered the IC4A indoor and outdoor championships, symbolic of Eastern track supremacy. The success of the track team is a testimony to coach Jim Kehoe, and has brought the University of Maryland great prestige across the nation.

triumph over arch-rival "The United States Naval Academy," as Coach Kehoe refers to the Annapolis school. Enroute to the ACC Meet, the Terps competed in such meets as the Boston A.S., Philadelphia Inquirer, and the National Track and Field Federation Meet. At Boston, Frank Costello established a university record in the high jump with a leap of 7′¼″. Dave Starnes ran a 9:09 in the two-mile run at Philadelphia to set a school record in that event. The two-mile relay quarter of Dan Donahue, Steve Washburn, George Henry, and Milt Matthews ran a 7:48.6 at the Federation meet to set still another Terp record.

Maryland next traveled to Chapel Hill, North Carolina, where they ran up an impressive 85 points to head off second place North Carolina with 32½ points, and the rest of the ACC. Individual champions included Pete Kowzun in the pole vault with a record-setting 15′3½″; Bruce Carson in the 70 yd. high hurdles; Frank Costello in the high jump; Ed Marks in the broad jump; Dave Starnes in the two mile; John Warfield in the 600 yd. run; and Milt Matthews, whose 2:16.7 set a record in the 1000 yd. run.

The following week, the ACC Champions arrived in Madison Square Garden as underdogs to Villanova in the IC4A Champinion. The Terrapins, however, proved the "experts" to be amateurs as their 28 points outdistanced Villanova, with 17, and the rest of the Eastern field. Most coaches would have been happy with one individual champion, but Coach Kehoe had four. Reigning NCAA high jump champion Frank Costello led the way by leaping 6′10″ for first place. Ernie Hearon upset his nemesis Rod Stewart of Duke in the shot put with a heave of 57′7½″. Ed Marks, then an unknown, surprised everybody by taking the broad jump with a 24′10¾″ effort. Sophomore Tom Gagner captured the pole vault with 15′4″.

At the NCAA Meet in Detroit, Maryland finished in a tie for seventh. Frank Costello was runner-up in the high jump behind Otis Burrell; Ed Marks took fourth in the broad jump; and Ernie Hearon set a University record of 58′1″ as he placed fifth in the shot put.

Maryland's first appearance outdoors was on April 3rd, when they split the squad, sending tracksters to both the South Carolina Relays, and the American University Relays. Although no official team scores were kept, the Terps scored heavily in both meets.

After defeating Duke and Virginia in a triangular meet, the Terps warmed up for the Penn Relays with 115-27 rout over North Carolina. The highlight of this meet was Frank Costello's jump of 7′1″ which broke his own University record. In the Penn Relays, three Terrapins won gold watches. Consistent Frank Costello paced first in the high jump; improved Dick Dull took first in the javelin throw; and sophomore Ed Marks won the triple jump with 48′½″—an event in which he had never participated before coming to Maryland!

The following week, Maryland stayed at home to host arch-rival Navy. Prior to the meet Coach Kehoe had warned his squad, "If it's close, you're going to lose it!" The Terrapins heeded his warning. The only thing close was the locker room, as the Terps gave Coach Kehoe a satisfying 89-51 victory. The Terps were paced by double winners Jim Lee, with wins in both the 100 and 220, and Ed Marks, who took firsts in the broad jump and triple jump.

The ACC meet was next. For the eleventh year in a row, Maryland sought the ACC crown, and for the eleventh year in a row, they brought it home. Blessed with great depth, the Terrapins literally dominated the whole meet, scoring 103 points. South Carolina was second with 54, and North Carolina was third with 23. Maryland captured an amazing 10 individual championships. Bruce Carson was a double winner, setting an ACC record in the 440 IH with 54.3, and winning the 120 high hurdles. Jim Lee also pulled off a double, winning the 100, and setting an ACC record of 21.0 in the 220. Dick Dull won the javelin, Frank Costello placed first in the high jump, and sophomores Dave Starnes and Tom Thompson took honors in the two-mile and pole vault respectively. A third double winner was Ed Marks who set an ACC record in the triple jump with 49′½″, and also won the broad jump. Dick Drescher set a University record in the discus with 159′¼″, while placing behind Art Swarts of South Carolina.

When Maryland arrived at Randall's Island, N.Y., for the outdoor IC4A's, the question in track experts minds was whether the Terps could outscore a strong team from—that's right—Villanova. The Maryland cindermen answered that question with a successful defense of their crown, scoring 40 points to runner-up Villanova's 32. Morgan State was third with 20 points and Penn State fourth with 17. Two first places—Frank Costello with 6′10″ in the high jump, and Ed Marks with 49′6½″ in the triple jump—coupled with great depth proved to be the key to Maryland's victory. An example of this support was Ernie Hearon's toss of 58′6″ in the shot put—good enough for second place and a University record.

In the NCAA in June, Frank Costello was second in the nation in the high jump, and Jim Lee was third and sixth in the 220 and the 100. Enroute to his places, Jim Lee established University records in both races with a 9.4 clocking in the 100, and a sensational 20.9 in the 220.

Maryland's 1966-67 team will be strengthened by a strong frosh team which was undefeated in dual competition. The track future at Maryland thus seems certain to continue its upward swing.

Maryland's Tennis Team managed a 9-5 season and a third place tie in the Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament despite early predictions of a rough season.

A rash of graduation losses and the return of only two first-stringers, Len Modzelewski and Tom Merriweather, prompted Team Coach Doyal Royal to say at the beginning of the year, "We will have to fight very hard to stay in the top half of the conference.

The team relied on the performance of the promising first year men, John Shaffer and Dick Harrington. Both boys came through with winning records.

The coach of the netmen, Doyal Royal, originally came to the University of Maryland in 1947 as the soccer coach. Coach Royal's tennis teams have never finished below fourth in the ACC. In 1957 and 1964, Maryland teams captured the conference title. Royal considers 1964 the best season Maryland has enjoyed in tennis. That year Maryland was rated in the top ten in the country and number one in the east. That season Maryland had two finalists in the tournament championships.

This season Maryland found league competition greatly improved over past year. Coach Royal thinks that the teams in the ACC are getting closer in their ability and toughness. Teams such as Wake Forest, South Carolina, and Virginia are now top threats to take the conference title. The University of North Carolina dominates the ACC as can be seen with their 9-0 defeat of Maryland. The ACC being a southern conference has more clement weather in which to practice. This plus fine coaching has made the ACC one of the top tennis conferences in the country.

Maryland opened their season against a tough Ivy League team in Dartmouth. This match was the start of a five game winning streak when Maryland edged Dartmouth 5-4. With relatively little trouble, they subdued Cornell, Syracuse, Johns Hopkins, and South Carolina. After losing to Clemson and beating Penn State, the Terp netmen trounced Wake Forest 9-0. With a record of seven wins in eight matches, the Terps prepared to meet the highly touted University of North Carolina. Despite great momentum and a home court advantage Maryland failed to win a point and lost to the Tar Heels 9-0. From there the Terps went on to lose three of their last five matches including a 5-4 loss to arch rival Navy.

Maryland received consistent play from the top seven men. All but one of the top seven had winning records. The individual records run: John Shaeffer 10-4, Rich Davis 8-6, Len Modzelewski 12-2, Frank Kready 8-6, Tom Merriweather 5-6, Ken Chapman 6-2, and Dick Harrington 7-3.

Next season the netmen will have stars George McGuire and Dave Werchen from the freshmen team. Coach Royal thinks that Maryland will again finish in the top half of the ACC.

Graduation

On June 3, 1967, Cole Field House will be filled to the rim with graduating seniors, their proud parents, relatives, and friends, and all the members of Maryland's academic family. Each and every one of approximately 4,000 students will receive a diploma with his name on it. This assembly line graduation is truely one of the miracles of modern times. Each successful graduate gets to meet his dean, briefly, for the first (and last) time in his academic career. As a graduating senior is on his way out (and up, we hope) this seems to be a very fitting farewell to standing on numerous long lines during his four year stay at Maryland.

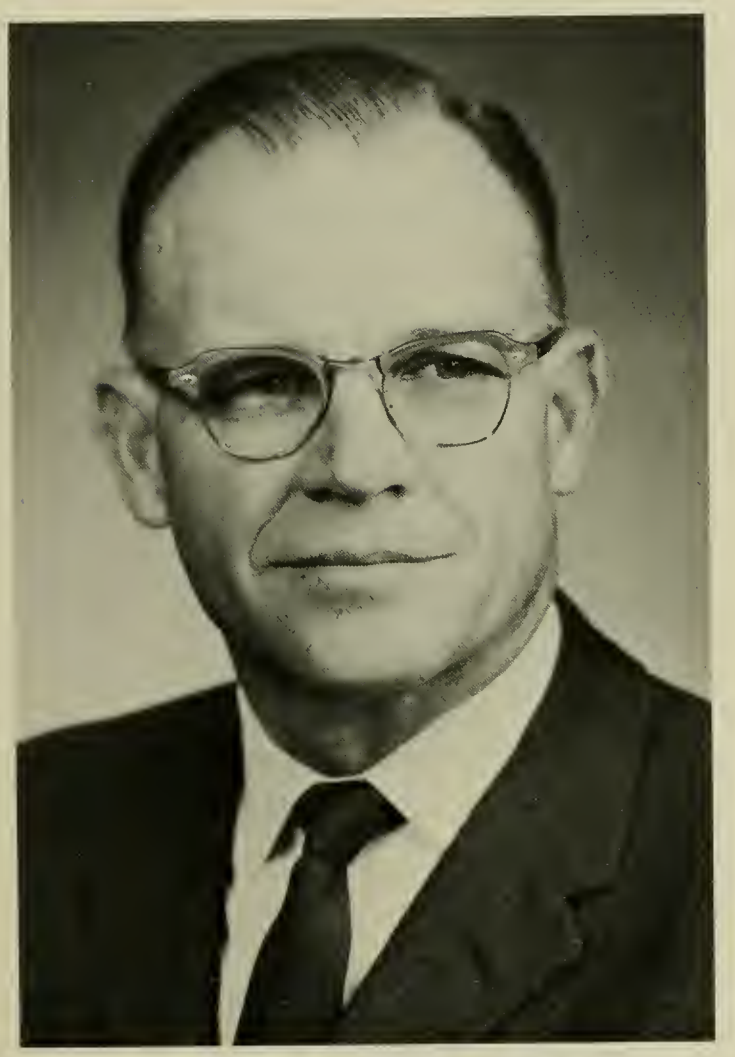
The two new members appointed by the Governor to the Board of Regents are Judge Mary Arabian of the Municipal Courts in Baltimore and Harry Boswell, Maryland attorney.

Though known for their responsibility to University policy and finance, the Board also acts as the State Board of Agriculture and in addition is responsible to the state for inspecting weights and measures.

President Wilson H. Elkins



Dr. Wilson H. Elkins, president of the University of Maryland since September 1, 1954, has a background of outstanding achievement in scholarship, leadership and athletics.

From 1933 to 1936, Dr. Elkins was a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford University, where he earned his Doctor of Philosophy degree.

His administration at Maryland has been marked with a consistent strengthening of academic standards despite tremendous increases in student enrollment. Doctor Elkins explained this year that Admission requirements will be raised as more facilities become available on the junior college level.

To the Freshman class he advised "Self discipline does not just happen. It requires concentration, thought, and practice." He urged the students to stand on their own two feet and think for themselves.

In December, Dr. Elkins was elected president of the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools during its 80th annual convention.

Colleges

Agriculture

Dean Gordon Cairns

Founded under the land grant college system in 1856, the College of Agriculture is the oldest division of the University of Maryland at College Park. Today the college, under the guidance of Dean Gordon Cairns still plays an important role in Maryland University training.

Many changes have taken place in the college since its establishment. A new wing which has recently been added to the H. J. Patterson building provides additional classroom space, including area for new geology laboratory facilities. A new Animal Science building is presently in the planning stage. Expansion is also taking place in facilities off the College Park campus. The College of Agriculture has been granted one-hundred acres on the upper Eastern Shore from the Wye Institute for crops and soil research.

Advancements in Agricultural research have also been taking place. The Salisbury farm has undergone expansion in poultry research, particularly in breeding studies and in environmental research. Etomological research facilities have also been expanded. A graduate study in connection with adding vitamin E to milk flavor has been initiated. Research advancements are also taking place in such areas as biochemical studies of food and milk flavors and studies of insect control through the use of pesticides.

Arts and Sciences

Dean Charles Manning

Formerly a sector of the English Department, the Comparative Literature program has become the sixteenth department of the expanding College of Arts and Sciences.

An extension of the Art Department can be seen in the new graduate program in museum training. One of the many exhibits run by graduate students this year was the outstanding collection of paintings in Meticulous Realism, shown at the Fine Arts Gallery.

To accommodate the expanding programs and mounting enrollment architectural supplements such as the Physics Lecture Hall and the addition to the Chemistry Building are in progress.

Of the ten Excellence in Teaching Awards given at the University the College of Arts and Sciences received six and on the nationwide scene, three of the fifty-seven endowments given by the National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities were received by members of the Arts and Sciences faculty. Another important honor was a further accrediting of the Music Department awarded by the National Association of Schools of Music.

In addition to its sixteen departments the College of Arts and Sciences includes the Institute of Molecular Physics.

Business and Public Administration

Dean Donald W. O'Connell

Expansion has earmarked the College of Business and Public Administration. The 1966 school year brought to B.P.A. a total of 3,522 students, a figure which has doubled itself since the year 1961. In order to satisfy its growing need for new facilities, the college enlarged its physical plant by refinishing and converting the attic of its main building into twenty-two new offices and seminar rooms.

Academically, the college carried on the spirit of expansion by innovating several new programs, the most important being the addition of the Doctor of Business Administration Program. The Department of Government and Politics is presently in the process of formulating a new honors program for its undergraduates which will allow students in the honor category to work independently on advanced studies in their chosen fields.

The growing faculty of B.P.A. became involved in various new and noteworthy projects. Dr. Frank Burdette, head of the Bureau of Governmental Research, holds membership on a committee which is investigating revision of the Maryland State Constitution. Dr. Dillon of the Department of Government and Politics is editing and compiling the papers of Governor Tawes.

Education

Dean Vernon E. Anderson

The College of Education under the supervision of Dean Veron E. Anderson has continued to grow and expand physically, administratively, and educationally. The new Educational Technology Center, the Science Teaching Center and several faculty offices and classrooms will, by summer 1967, occupy the basement of the new Education building. The College also expanded administratively with the creation of three new departments which represent past programs: Administration, Supervision and Curriculum; Counseling and Student Personnel; and Special Education.

Educationally the College has grown by the addition of new programs and grants. The Early Childhood-Elementary Department in cooperation with the University College has received a federal grant for the training and development of teachers in the Pennsylvania-Maryland-District of Columbia areas for project "Head Start." The program includes an experimental nursery-kindergarten for children in "a pocket of poverty" where new ideas, methods and equipment can be tested. The Maryland Elementary Mathematics Inservice Program (MEMIP) under a federal grant was initiated during the summer of 1966 to develop and demonstrate a team-taught inservice mathematical model for local elementary school teachers.

Engineering

Dean Robert B. Beckmann

The College of Engineering was established in 1894 and has conferred over 5000 baccalaureate degrees in engineering since 1898. Today there are over 2500 undergraduates 500 graduates enrolled in this ever expanding College. It is comprised of six departments; aerospace, chemical, civil, electrical, fire protection and mechanical. Although the largest department is electrical, with over forty percent of the students, the chemical is the striking. Last year the Chemical Engineering Department conferred thirteen Ph.D. degrees which ranks that department among the top six in the country.

The most outstanding feature of the College is its rapidly expanding graduate departments. Over $1.5 million have been allocated for graduate research program this year. The Fluid Dynamics and Applied Mathematical Institute is internationally known for its research. On campus the new Space Sciences Building is part of the Fluid Dynamics research divisions. Also, Dr. H. Lansberg, a member of the National Academy of Engineering recently joined this graduate division.

Retiring Dean Allen's office was taken over last September by Dr. R. B. Beckmann who was formerly head of the Chemical Engineering Department.

The goals of the College are to lead in the education of engineers by keeping pace with new emerging ideas and by developing in the student proficiency in the methods and techniques essential to the profession of engineering.

Graduate School

Dr. Michael J. Pelczar, Jr.

The rapidly growing Maryland University Graduate School has as its new leader Dr. Michael J. Pelczar, Jr., of the microbiology department. Dr. Pelczar is the former president of the American Association of University Professors and the Washington Branch of the American Society for Microbiology.

This year the University's Graduate School has grown more in percentage of students than the undergraduate school. Besides extensions in Baltimore, graduate facilities will find housing in the future South Annex to the administration Building.

New positions of leadership are necessary to organize this expanding program. Dr. David S. Sparks of the University History Department is the first to hold the title of Associate Dean for Humanities and Social Sciences.

In the Graduate Program, professors are selected to help a student's thesis work and formulate an appropriate program of research in the student's chosen field.

Home Economics

Dean Erna R. Chapman

Saving the brainpower of thousands of children is a notable topic in the College of Home Economics. Publicized experiments porformed this year in the Nutrition Department have demonstrated that a common form of mental retardation caused by a lack of the amino acid PK U can be eliminated by a specific diet. Because of an inborn fault in metabolism the children concerned cannot utilize this acid without the artificial supplement in the newly discovered diet.

Also this year in a project concerning weight loss, reason was found to believe that a change in body composition is only successful in diets including exercise.

In conjunction with the State Department the College of Home Economics held a summer course to instruct nineteen African women how to teach Home Economics in secondary schools back home. Participants were from Gabon, Malagasy, Senegad, and Togo.

The Dean of the College, Erna R. Chapman, noted that Home Economics students work directly with the public in many of their Health, Education, and Commercial projects. Dean Chapman also announced the renaming and refurbishing of Home Economics building next fall.

Library Science

Dean Paul Wasserman

On the fourth floor of the McKeldin Library lies the headquarters for all students working toward a Library Science Certificate. This year more than 100 students are enrolled in this expanding program. After taking the six undergraduate courses offered in this field, each student must spend a total of sixteen weeks in Librarian capacities in local public schools.

Professor Dale W. Brown, who instructs the courses concerning children's materials, is particularly proud of the 5000 volumes comprising the children's book collection at McKeldin Library. Records, film strips and pictures are also available in the collection.

O. I. R.

Dr. Macon H. Capelle

Is it necessary to think of changing your goals? The OIR can help.

The Office of Intermediate Registration was established in 1957 to enable students through counseling to undertake the work they are best suited for. If a student decides to transfer colleges, he may not do so if on probation or having less than a 2.0 cumulative average in courses applicable to the college he wishes to enter, but he may register in the OIR program and begin immediately in his new field instead of spending time improving in a curriculum he has already decided to drop.

The student in OIR receives intensive guidance from advisors who have an interest in the individual and a reliable knowledge of the inner workings of every college on campus.

The OIR, directed by Macon H. Capelle, fulfills a definite campus need to reduce academic frustrations. Plans for expanding the program were begun in November by a committee established by R. Lee Hornbake, vice president for academic affairs and by Leslie R. Bundgaard, executive Dean for Student Life.

Physical Education

Dean Lester M. Fraley

The College of Physical Education this year altered its format by initiating a three department type system which consisted of the Department of Phyiscal Education, the Department of Health, and the Department of Recreation each of which was directed by a separate department head.

Under the leadership of Dean Lester M. Fraley, the college continued to offer stimulating programs in Dance and Physical Therapy. It also boasted an outstanding faculty whose individual members contributed to the literature and development of Health and Physical Education through the publication of textbooks and through research.

In the required physical education program, several new courses were inaugurated. A free exercise class was started as was a course in conditioning which made use of various types of Physical Apparatus. Also, the department continued to operate its unique Indoor Golf Stadium which allowed students to participate in actual golf games during inclement weather.

University College

Dean Ray Ehrensberger

The University College, with an enrollment of approximately 97,000, serves adults throughout the Washington and Maryland area by offering standard college courses during the evening hours. Headed by Dean Ray Ehrensberger, University College offers courses at two hundred education centers in twenty-four foreign countries on four continents. The services of University College have also been extended to serve GI's in Europe and the Far East.

Two programs are offered to those attending University College's evening courses: a BA in General Studies and a BS in Military Studies. By establishing education centers throughout the world, University College is able to extend the services of the University.

From the editor's desk . . . .

It becomes difficult to do a yearbook for a school with over 20,000 students. Everybody can't have his picture in the book. Somebody is going to be displeased because her favorite club didn't get a four page spread. Unfortunately, we can't please everyone.

We did try to represent the University with a series of picture stories touching on many different facets of campus life. This idea is not a new one. It was first tried in 1963 by Emory Kristof, and every Terrapin since then has used the picture story concept. We are using more picture stories than ever before, almost 300 pages.

We are also featuring a new "arrival" at Maryland: The fine arts; dance, drama, music, art and photography. The arts have always been with us. This year, during the first full year for the Tawes Fine Arts Center, they have come into their own. University Theater's productions have all been sell-outs. Thousands were turned away from the Martha Graham and Van Cliburn performances. Many students have been filing through the art gallery to see the wonderful shows displayed there. In short, Maryland is experiencing a "cultural revolution." We salute this revolution, and hope it continues in years to come.

Putting together a book as large as the Terrapin is no small task, and many long hours of work by many people, went into its production. I would like to thank some of these people: My staff, who actually made this book; Phil Geraci, our advisor, who always provided a needed shoulder to cry on; Mrs. Mary Donaldson for her help in keeping our finances straight; Clayton Plummer and Paul Thomas for their help in designing the specifications for the book; Mrs. Doris Powell and Jim McWilliams, of Foote and Davies, our printer, for their patience, understanding, and interest; Buck May, of Harris and Ewing photographers, for getting over 2,000 seniors photographed; Jim Sams, of Kingsport Press, for an excellent job on our cover; all the members of the Diamondback staff who helped us out with copy and pictures for the Newslog and sports features; and the Dance, Drama, Music and Art departments for their help and cooperation in producing the Creative Maryland features.

To those new yearbook editors who are wondering: We used a 10 pt. Times Roman Body Type with one pt. of lead, Times Roman and Baskerville display faces, printed on an enamel stock. The cover design was silk screened on a linen finish buckram.

DIAMONDBACK

Enterprise reporting that gained national attention highlighted the 1966-67 Diamondback. Investigative reporter Anne Groer won a national award for her in-depth study of drugs on the University campus. In another article, Political Affairs Editor Ira Allen was quoted around the country after he discovered that draft cards were being illegally reproduced and sold by a University student. His front page story brought a quick end to the enterprise.

Diamondback staffers also won awards for an article about the University's veterans housing and an editorial questioning judicial procedure at the University. Accompanying that enterprise was a continuation of the Diamondback's broad-based policy of service to campus organizations. An expanded news staff—sometimes involving a hundred or more correspondents—helped bring the Diamondback's basic commodity of campus news to its audience of campus readers.

And more than ever before, the Diamondback aimed at reporting exclusive news only hours after it took place, regularly beating metropolitan newspaper competition. In December's Student Union disturbances, for example, Diamondback editors pooled special task forces daily for saturation coverage of the news—and for clearly-labeled interpretation of its causes.

With the addition of an Associated Press wire, Diamondback editors also examined state news as it affected the University. They supplemented wire service profiles of major gubernatorial candidates with exclusive interviews and provided the fastest, most accurate election returns of any newspaper in both primary and general elections.

And with the creation of the exchange editor's position, editors hoped to broaden the Diamondback's perspective by offering significant news from other campuses. Meanwhile, the Diamondback's sports department also won its share of top stories. The paper reported exclusively, for example, that three top aides to former football coach Lou Saban would join Saban in Denver. In addition, sports editors increased coverage of late-night events for the next morning's editions.

A new look on the Damondback's editorial pages, complete with specially-chosen type faces, also greeted University students this year. Meanwhile, the Diamondback continued enlarging its photo staff, one of the most honored in collegiate journalism. Consistently receiving high ratings from national groups, Diamondback photographers prepared a record number of photo pages on subjects ranging from mini skirts to sports to theatre.

In another area, the Diamondback boosted circulation to a record 17,000 four times a week to better serve University students. In advertising, the Diamondback also sported another record and helped support the greatest number of pages in 59 years of publication.
